

U. S. BEER TAX IS DEFEATED

SENATORS CALL G. E. Q. JOHNSON, AID SUES LOESCH

Push Capital Inquiry on Capone's Power.

Both Washington and Chicago contributed activities yesterday to the Wilkerson inquiry following the telegram which Frank J. Loesch sent to the senate judiciary committee supporting the appointment of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Mr. Loesch charged that Al Capone's influence was being used against the elevation of Wilkerson, who sentenced Capone to 11 years for income tax fraud.

District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson was summoned to Washington to appear before the subcommittee by Senator William E. Borah (Rep., Idaho), its chairman.

Mr. Johnson announced that Mr. Loesch will be subpoenaed to appear April 13 before the federal grand jury which will investigate charges of underworld influence in Chicago politics and labor unions.

Prosecutor Sues Loesch.

As a Chicago contribution to the controversy, Assistant District Attorney William Parrillo started suit for $250,000 against Mr. Loesch, who called him "a known partisan of Capone's" in the telegram to the senate subcommittee.

Victor A. Olander, secretary treasurer of the Illinois Federation of Labor, wired Senator Borah styling Mr. Loesch's account of the Capone-controlled unions "recklessly false and against the trade union movement of Chicago."

Mr. Parrillo also telegraphed Senator Borah, asking that he be allowed to appear before the subcommittee and deny Mr. Loesch's charges against him.

Ask About Capone Deal.

The summons to Mr. Johnson was understood to mean that the senators are seeking further information regarding the negotiations to permit Capone to plead guilty to the income tax charges. In return for a promise of a sentence of two and a half years which was sought by the defense.

The negotiations for a two and a half year sentence for Capone were initiated by defense counsel, who sought and obtained a conference with Mr. Johnson on the subject. He informed them that any agreement on the subject would require the approval of the trial judge. Mr. Johnson is expected to tell the senators what steps, if any, were taken to bring the matter to Judge Wilkerson's attention.

Capone Plea Withdrawn.

The net result of the negotiations was that Capone withdrew his plea of guilty, was tried before a jury and convicted after Judge Wilkerson made his famous statement that one cannot bargain with a federal court.

Mr. Johnson will likewise tell the subcommittee of Judge Wilkerson's conduct of the trials of Capone and Terry Druggan and Frank Lake, now in the Leavenworth penitentiary for income tax evasion. He will also describe the judge's bitter denunciation of the whole Capone gang on the day when he sentenced Philip D'Andrea, Capone's bodyguard, to jail for carrying a pistol into his courtroom.

Mr. Johnson was also informed yesterday that the subcommittee wished to hear him regarding Mr. Loesch's charges against his assistant, Mr. Parrillo.

The Loesch Telegram.

In his telegram to Washington Mr. Loesch included a charge that five candidates for Republican ward committeemen opposing Parrillo, who is also a candidate, were kidnapped and forced to sign withdrawals as candidates. The withdrawals were said by Loesch to be beneficial to Parrillo, who, he said, is nominated, will have the "so-called liquor, vice, gambling, and political control of that ward."

"Mr. Parrillo has been on leave for about ten days while campaigning for ward committeeman," said Prosecutor Johnson in announcing that he would call Loesch before the grand jury. "During more than four years of his service his work in this office has been creditable and satisfactory."

"Two of the candidates who withdrew were members of my organization," Parrillo said last night. "I don't know the others, and never did. I never heard anything about any of them being kidnapped until I read in the newspapers what the grand jury intend to protect myself against such slander and if I recover any money from him I will give it to charity."

Parrillo is the beneficiary of the withdrawals of the other candidates," Mr. Loesch said when advised of the suit and his grand jury summons. "That territory is controlled by Capone. I have no hesitancy in meeting the issue anywhere, but of course I can't make public the sources of my information."

Village Clerk and Shotgun Guard Water

Villagers of Midlothian were up in arms, one of them literally, in a water war last night. Even the village board took part by passing a special ordinance intended to assist the people.

The trouble arose over the shutting off of water to eight families, some of whom are suffering from illness, and the threatened stoppage to approximately seventy other families because of unpaid bills. Among the families now without water is that of Trustee William Kreis of 14333 South Lavendale avenue. Among those threatened is the family of Village Clerk William Schallerer of 147th place and Hamilton avenue. Schallerer was the man actually in arms last night.

Gilday's Friend Is Target.

As explained by complaining villagers, the fight is with John R. Robertson, a real estate operator of Midlothian. Robertson received public notice last December when he helped furnish ball for Daniel L. Gilday, dry reformer under a one to fourteen year prison sentence for shooting Herman Knol, 17 year old Samaritan. Robertson sold land or homes to some 150 families in Midlothian. At the same time he supplied their water at a rate of $1 a month.

Last October the water service was taken over by the Suburban Utilities company, 35 North Dearborn street, allegedly headed by Robertson, and the monthly rate increased to $2. Consequently some eight families felt behind in payments.

Discontinuance of service followed. However, the water system consists of a central main, and to shut off supplies to homes the company found that it must dig a hole in the streets in front of the delinquent residences to reach the mains. At this point, after a half dozen homes had been deprived of water, the Midlothian village board took action.

Trustees Take a Hand.

The trustees met Thursday night. They voted that hereafter no excavations might be made into the village streets without special permits and that a violation would mean a $5,000 fine. But the ordinance is not immediately effective because the village rules specify that a new ordinance is not in full force until ten days after its passage. Thus, officials pointed out last night, the Suburban Utilities company might shut off the water of all eighty delinquents by that time.

When Village Clerk Schallerer learned of this he prepared. He put up a tent in the street in front of his home and armed himself with a shotgun. He announced he or a neighbor would remain on vigil all night.

"I defy any one to dig a hole in front of my home and shut off the water," he challenged.

COP LETS BANDITS TRAP HIM; THEN HE KILLS ONE

Walking intentionally into a bandit trap, and permitting himself to be robbed, Policeman Ray Geisler of the Woodlawn station, turned on two gunmen last night, shot and killed one of them, and captured the other.

The shooting took place in the New Park hotel, 1547 East 67th place. The slain gunman was Jack Hawes, 22 years old, of 6450 Kimbark avenue.

Geisler borrowed a civilian coat and hat to substitute for his uniform, and went to the bandits' room. There Hawes threatened him with a revolver, and robbed him. Meanwhile, King and Leach waited outside. Suddenly, Policeman Geisler seized Hawes' revolver, drew his own and shot the bandit in the abdomen. He then subdued Haller.

Bomb Blast at Cigar Store Causes $150 Loss

A small bomb was exploded early this morning at the front entrance of Theodore Zewitzky's cigar and ice cream store at 2659 West 21st street, doing about $150 damage. Zewitzky, his wife, and three children, who live in the rear, were jarred.

Frank Lloyd Wright Tells Life and Love

The sixty-two tempestuous years of Frank Lloyd Wright's life have at last been chronicled by the architect himself. The announcement was made yesterday that his autobiography is to be published next Wednesday.

Since 1907 Wright's domestic affairs often have been front page news. He was married four times. At one period three women, all of whom he eventually married, fought bitterly for his affections. His second wife and her two children were murdered by a madman armed with an ax. His third wife died hating him. His first wife still expresses a deep regard for him.

Reputation Is International.

In intervals between rebuilding his home at Taliesin, near Spring Green, Wis., destroyed by fire twice; resting in jail on Mann act charges; appearing in court to answer a hundred accusations ranging from non-support to adultery, Wright found time to establish an international reputation as an architect. In Europe and the orient he was, and is, known as the exponent of the American expression in architecture.

His designing of the Imperial Hotel in Tokio was one of his triumphs. Especially constructed to withstand earthquake tremors, the building was an experiment until the great quake of 1923 left it standing alone in the wreckage and once again proved the authenticity of Wright's genius.

Wright was born June 8, 1869, near Spring Green, Wis., where he built Taliesin, a beautiful structure of native limestone. In 1909. He was graduated in civil engineering from the University of Wisconsin in 1888 and soon afterwards married Catherine Lee. In 1903 he moved to Oak Park and became known as a designer of unique homes. He had six children by his first wife.

Meets Wife of Attorney.

He designed a home for Attorney Edwin L. Cheney, wealthy resident of Oak Park, and thus met Mrs. Cheney, who was the former Mamah Borthwick, known for her beauty. In 1907 Wright and Mrs. Cheney traveled together to Berlin where he calmly registered at a hotel as "Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lloyd Wright." The conservative set of Oak Park in that day was shocked at this report, but was even more startled when Wright expressed no surprise.

"I know all about it," she said, "and I expect him to come back to me. That woman is a vampire, and I know that Frank is as innocent as a baby. I will be waiting for him."

This unconventional attitude was to be displayed by all the four women who figured in the loves of the architect.

LINDBERGH AID TALKS TO AGENT FOR KIDNAPERS

BULLETIN.

Hopewell, N. J., March 26 (Saturday).—(Special.)—Shortly before 3 o'clock this morning two men arrived in Hopewell in a mud splattered sedan bearing a Maryland license. They asked to be shown to a telephone, from which they called Col. Henry C. Breckinridge, Col. Lindbergh's personal counsel, at the Lindbergh Soudland mountain home. After a brief conversation the men were asked to go to the Lindbergh home, which they did at once. In their brief stay in the village they admitted their mission was connected with the baby's disappearance. Their names, they said, were Smith and McFall.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—(P)—An intensive search for Harry Fleischer, reputed leader of the Detroit Purple gang, sought in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping, was launched here tonight by police on receipt of a report that an individual greatly resembling him had applied for lodging at a rooming house.

A radio and teletype warning to all precincts ordered the search for Fleischer, one henchman, a woman, and a baby.

"These men are dangerous," the police instructions read.

New York, March 25.—(Special.)—Promises that the Lindbergh baby would be restored to its parents soon were repeated today in Norfolk, Va., but they found no echo in Hopewell, N. J., where Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh waited, ready to consider any new proposal of the kidnapers.

John H. Curtis, president of the Curtis Gas Engine and Boat company of Norfolk, said he had been in communication with a man representing the kidnapers early Thursday morning, a few hours after he returned from the Lindbergh home.

Mr. Curtis is acting with the Rev. H. Dobson Peacock, dean of Christ Episcopal church of Norfolk, and Rear Admiral John H. Burrage of that city in an effort to recover the child. All three believe that they have been in indirect communication with the kidnapers, despite the New Jersey police efforts to discount the importance of their information.

Denies Lindy to Fly For Son.

Dr. Peacock denied reports the baby was held on a yacht in Chesapeake bay and he declared there was no basis for the report that Col. Lindbergh was preparing to fly to Norfolk to get his son.

"Since the publication of our efforts to recover the child," he said, "we have made no attempt to communicate with the go-between, have the baby. Until we do make contact with that person, there will be no further effort made to have the child returned."

Mr. Curtis said he made contact with the man who first informed him of the whereabouts of the kidnapped boy three hours after he and Admiral Burrage and Dean Peacock returned from their trip to the Lindbergh estate. That was at about 5 o'clock Thursday morning.

Confers on Kidnap Channels.

New methods and ways of assuring the kidnapers that they can deal directly with the aviator or his representatives without fear of prosecution were discussed during the day at a conference attended by Col. Lindbergh, Col. Henry Breckinridge, and Morris Rosner, one of their private agents.

What connection, if any, this conference had with the latest report of contact with the baby's kidnapers was not revealed.

Only by assuming that Col. Lindbergh was keeping the police in the dark could the statements of three prominent citizens of Norfolk be reconciled with the statements of Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police. He said:

"The Rev. Dobson Peacock and two other citizens of Norfolk are not negotiating for the return of the baby so far as the police authorities at Hopewell know. They visited Col. Lindbergh on Wednesday night and gave him information which, on being investigated, was found to have no specific significance. There has been no report made to the police as to the finding of any piece of the baby's clothing."

Girl Secretary Traps a Fake Gem Swindler

Operations of "cable" swindlers who have tried to victimize some of Chicago's wealthiest business men were interrupted yesterday by the arrest of one alleged member of the gang. A month ago the secretary of Chauncey McCormick was defrauded of $5,925 by means of a fake cablegram.

On Friday it became known that the confidence man had tried to defraud Edward A. Cudahy, the packer, and Walter R. Kirk, president of the Dickinson corporation.

The method of the operators is to send to the office of the victim a fake telegram or cable message instructing the business man's secretary to pay a man who will call later a specified sum—usually $1,500 or more—for jewelry, and to keep the matter quiet. An alert secretary who had read about Messrs. McCormick, Cudahy and Kirk said a trap yesterday and caused the arrest of a swindler who had just traded five bits of cut glass for a dummy money package.

Girl Traps a Swindler.

Miss Alice Solick, in the office of A. J. Pixley, 64 East Lake street, head of the Pixley & Ehlers chain of restaurants, was the heroine of the capture. On her arrival at the office she found a telegram. It instructed her to deliver to a Mr. Gold $1,800 for five stones.

"Treat this matter personally and confidentially," the message continued. "Pay in cash and hold stones until I return."

At the end of the message was Mr. Pixley's name. Miss Solick, who afterward admitted that she was angry at the swindlers for "thinking I would fall for that old one even after it was in the papers," waited and when "Mr. Gold" called she instructed him to meet her at the Northern Trust company.

She Notifies Detectives.

Then she notified the detective bureau and Sgt. Daniel Moriarty and Daniel Kenney were assigned to help her. The swindler failed to appear on time. Then he called the Pixley office again and it was agreed to meet again in the same bank. When the swindler's messenger arrived he was only a newsboy, but he traded the glass for the dummy package and left, followed by the two policemen.

At Dearborn and Madison streets the lad met a man who took the package and handed him $2. The receiver was arrested. He said he was Tully Warner, 29 years old, 2123 Ballou street, but he declined to make any statement about his part in the plot.

Swindlers Fail to Appear.

Similar messages were received yesterday from the office of Henry H. Windsor, 800 East Ontario street, publisher of Popular Mechanics, and Felix J. Streycykman in the administration building of the World's Fair. Mr. Windsor is in Miami and Mr. Streycykman is traveling in Europe in the interests of the fair.

Their secretaries notified the police and also tried to set snares for the swindlers, but one who called the swindler's office failed to keep an engagement and no one tried to get in touch with Mr. Streycykman's aids. All the messages apparently had been slipped under the office doors during the night.

HOUSE SEEKING NEW EXCISE TO BOOST REVENUE

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING, (Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., March 25.—(Special.)—While the house this afternoon was rejecting the proposed beer tax with its estimated yield of 450 millions of dollars a year, a new subcommittee of the ways and means committee set out to find excise taxes that will produce more than half a billion in place of the sales tax defeated yesterday.

The vote on the proposal to tax beer of 2.75 per cent alcoholic content 3 cents a bottle was 132 ayes and 216 nays. The wets, on this division, fell far short of their recently established mark, when the vote on the proposed constitutional amendment to restore state control of liquor was 187 ayes and 237 nays.

Fight on Oil Tax Fades.

Following the beer battle, the fight against the provision of the billion dollar tax bill, imposing an excise tax of 1 cent a gallon on imported gasoline and crude fuel oils, which was led by the New England delegations, petered out. The amendment offered by Representative John W. McCormack (Mass.) to strike out this provision was lost 97 to 100. Proponents of this tax asserted it would yield from 40 to 60 millions, but the treasury estimated five millions.

The next tax hunting subcommittee is composed of Representatives Hart, Ragan (Dem., Ark.), Carl Vinson (Dem., Ky.), Harry C. Canfield (Dem., Ind.), Willis C. Hawley (Rep., Ore.), and Allen T. Treadway (Rep., Mass.). It has undertaken to report a schedule of substitute taxes to the ways and means committee, Monday.

Discusses Suggested Schedule.

At the first session of the committee this afternoon, discussion revolved around a suggested schedule of taxes which it was estimated would yield 632 millions of the 1 billion 241 millions required to balance the budget next year.

The estimated yield from the defeated sales tax was 595 millions.

	Yield.
Postage increase to 3 cents, first class matter.....	$135,000,000
Gasoline, 1 cent per gallon.....	100,000,000
Bank checks, 2 cents stamp tax.....	97,000,000
Automobiles, 5 per cent excise on passenger cars, 3 per cent on trucks, 2 1/2 per cent on parts and accessories.....	100,000,000
Photographs and radios, 5 per cent excise.....	10,000,000
Tobacco, one-sixth increase.....	50,000,000
Real estate transfers, one-fourth of 1 per cent on values.....	15,000,000
Electric energy and gas, 7 per cent on domestic consumption.....	57,000,000
Total.....	$632,000,000

Hoover Warns of Danger.

President Hoover asserted today in a White House statement that the budget must be balanced lest "the depression be prolonged indefinitely." "The deficit," he said, must be wiped out by decreased public expenditure and increased taxes. Contending that of his four billion 100 million budget for 1933, two billions 100 millions constitute an "inheritance of the great war" that cannot be reduced, and 700 millions for national defense that should not be reduced, the President said that economies are restricted to the remaining 1 billion 300 millions.

"Every reduction that can be made without serious injury to these services and injurious to our people must be effected," Mr. Hoover added. But whatever the economies effected, "entirely increased taxation will be unavoidable, he held, and he appealed to the people to "support and not obstruct" congress in reducing expenditures and raising taxes.

Fail to Sidelack Beer Vote.

The drys sought to sidetrack the beer tax amendment on a point of order that it was not germane to the tax bill. But Representative William B. Bankhead (Dem., Ala.), chairman of the committee of the whole, held it germane in a ruling in which he pointed out that the Supreme court never has held 2.75 per cent beer inconsistent with the eighteenth amendment.

Representative T. H. Cullen (Dem., N. Y.), Tammany leader, sponsor of the amendment, argued that it would send approximately 450 million dollars into the now depleted treasury of the United States every year "without disturbing any industry but that of the bootleggers."

CHILLY EASTER IS PREDICTED BY WEATHER MAN

The latest weather forecast indicates that winter coats will be worn over Easter finery tomorrow.

"Somewhat unsettled, with temperatures below normal," was the official opinion of Senior Meteorologist C. A. Donnel.

Today is expected to be cloudy and colder, although possibilities of rain are slight. It was an estimated loss of 100,000 in the Morris & Co. fertilizer plant, owned by Armour & Co. The plant is a four story brick building, 150 by 100 feet, at Loomis and 44th streets. A watchman discovered the fire, turned in an alarm, and fled.

When firemen under Division Marshal Patrick Egan of the 4th division arrived they found access to the building was blocked by a long string of freight cars, and began sounding early alarms. By the time an engine was obtained to remove the cars the flames had swept through the structure. Spontaneous combustion was given as the supposed cause of the fire.

Democrat from Georgia and acting chairman of the ways and means committee, warned the house against introducing the controversial prohibition issue in the revenue bill, and thus jeopardizing its passage "when it is imperative to the country that the budget be balanced."

Taunted by opponents who called out that he, himself, proposed a tax on wort and malt, he replied:

"My amendment is on wort and malt, but when the tax is levied they are legal. To make them obnoxious, according to the Volstead act, one must add water and other ingredients."

Take Turns Hoisting.

The drys clapped and the wets booed, even as earlier the wets clapped and the drys booed wet speakers. For it was a debate of screams as well as speeches.

For instance, when Representative R. G. Simmons (Rep., Neb.), a dry, protested that the drys were getting the worst of it in time allotment that only two drys had spoken while seven wets had said their pieces, up rose Representative W. H. Stafford (Rep., Wis.), dripping wet, to shout: "Seven to two, sure, that's right: that's just about the proportion of drys to wets in this house."

Illinois contributed three speakers, all Republicans, in support of the wet amendment.

Fred A. Britten of Chicago, whose amendment to increase the tax from 3 to 4 cents per pint was ruled out of order, told the house that "it is up to us, this afternoon, to determine for ourselves and for the country whether we are going to impose a voluntary, cheerful tax on beer to the tune of four or five or six, or maybe even seven hundred million dollars a year or a lot of nuisance taxes."

Predicts Defeat as Dry.

Commenting on the growth of wet sentiment throughout the country, Mr. Britten pointed out that Representative J. G. Cooper (Rep., O.), who remarked:

"Why, only last week you told me you thought you'd be defeated back home because you voted dry."

Mr. Cooper protested, and finally was granted permission to explain that if he were defeated he would have the "satisfaction of a clear conscience," and the debate proceeded.

Representative Carl Chidholm of Chicago, for many years a dry, declared that he was for the amendment because it would raise revenue, allay discontent among the laboring classes, and "do more to stop lawlessness than any other one thing we could do."

Says Beer's Here; Tax It.

It's all nonsense, argued Representative M. J. Maas (Rep., Minn.), for the drys to protest against bringing beer back.

"Beer's here," he declared, "and we've got to decide, wet or dry, is whether or not we're going to collect on it for the people through government, or whether we're going to let the criminals get it all."

Representative Frank Oliver (Dem., N. Y.) supported this theory in his plea to "break the back of prohibition, so that we can break the back of crime, which prohibition finances."

It is about time, he believes, to do something about bootleggers' profits and national deficits.

"Prohibition," he said, "is on the spot. Dry representatives, dry senators, a dry President for ten years, and—a pause—and now a dry deficit."

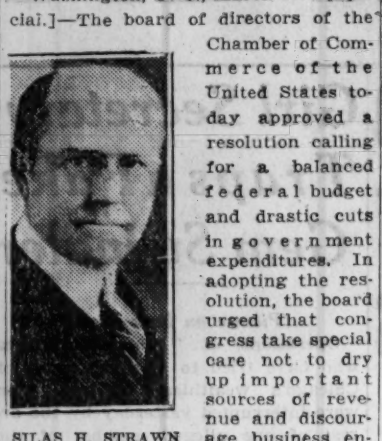

And when Representative J. W. Summers, dry Republican from Washington, argued that you can't buy booze and boots with the same dollar, and that he'd prefer boots, Representative Ralph Horr, also a Republican from Washington, but wet, shouted back at him: "Yes, but now you buy your boots for the bootlegger."

NATIONAL C. OF C. WARNS OF PERIL IN UNWISE TAXES

Washington, D. C., March 25.—(Special.)—The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States today approved a resolution calling for a balanced federal budget and drastic cuts in government expenditures. In adopting the resolution, the board urged that congress take special care not to dry up important sources of revenue and discourage business enterprise by levying unwise taxes.

In offering the resolution, Silas Strawn, president of the chamber, asserted that his trip to Europe had convinced him of the peril that lies in unbalanced national budgets.

Poor Outlook in Europe.

Mr. Strawn said that business and trade conditions had improved but slightly in Great Britain. He said trade in France has been badly damaged by reason of the general decrease in purchasing power throughout the world and the abandonment of the gold standard by other countries. The fall in tourist trade has affected many industries and commercial activities, Mr. Strawn said. As for Germany, Mr. Strawn said economic conditions there "present a most serious problem."

The resolution, as adopted by the board of directors, follows:

"Balancing the national budget through proper measures of economy and taxation is the first essential for improvement in the country's economic position. It will strengthen credit, public and private. It will give opportunity for that confidence which will permit business to go forward. It will prepare the way for increased employment. For the public welfare there can be no alternative for a balanced budget."

"Every economy should be put into effect. Drastic cuts in government expenditures can and must be made. Such reductions depend upon the readiness of every one to forego special interest in appropriations. Supporting congress in reducing total expenditures means supporting congress in reducing particular expenditures."

Warned of Tax Levy.

"To balance the budget under present conditions requires not only the strictest economy in expenditures but additional taxes, carefully framed. In levying such taxes great care and fairness should prevail so as not to dry up important sources of income and discourage business enterprise, on which employment depends."

"We appeal to the public spirit of congress to review very carefully methods and rates but to aim unwaveringly to the essential objective of a balanced budget."

"This emergency calls for placing the national welfare above all other considerations so that the credit of our government shall not be placed in jeopardy, and we appeal to all other organizations to join with us in this patriotic movement."

HUNT DESERTER IN WASHINGTON THREAT CASES

Washington, D. C., March 25.—(Special.)—A deserter from the marine corps was being sought by police today as the possible extortionist who has written threatening letters to Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, widow of the late speaker of the house, and Sir Willmot Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times. Police officials admitted that the man they sought was a sergeant.

The sergeant left the marine barracks here March 3 and has not been seen by his superiors since that time. Searching the belongings of the soldier, detectives found letter paper which resembled the stationery on which the two letters to Mrs. Longworth and Sir Willmot were written. Capt. R. W. Thompson of the detective bureau, accompanied by a stenographer, went to the marine barracks today and took samples of the writing from every typewriter. These were sent to the bureau of standards for comparison with the threatening notes.

A constant police guard has been installed at the home of Sir Willmot, 1665 New Hampshire avenue, as a result of two threatening letters and a mysterious telephone call received there this week. A guard placed around the home of Mrs. Longworth, who received an extortion note three weeks ago, has been removed at her request.

YOUTH SEIZED AS BANDIT.

TAXES TO 'SOAK THE RICH' CALLED A STUPID POLICY

Business Leaders Warn of Blow at Revival.

Chicago business leaders yesterday criticized proposals in congress to make huge levies on incomes and estates as likely to contribute further to the depression by adding to unemployment. Many expressed regret at the failure of the house to accept the sales tax, holding that it was the most equitable way to produce revenue in the government's emergency.

Following are some of the comments:

PHILIP R. CLARKE, president of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company and prominent in civic affairs: "I consider proposal to impose excessive taxes both unwise and stupid. Excessive taxes will take away the wealth of those who provide employment and thereby further reduce the number of jobs available. I believe that the sales tax would have been the most equitable way of producing revenues for the government in the present economic stress."

GEORGE W. ROSEBERRY, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce: "It is fundamental that the national budget should be balanced. I believe that everything considered, the sales tax would have been the proper thing, as it would have distributed taxes equitably. Additional heavy taxes will hurt business, thereby reducing the chances for increasing employment."

CHARLES S. DEWEY, vice president of the Palmolive company: "We were in favor of a manufacturers' sales tax without exemption as being a fair way of meeting the present budget emergency. I am not informed as to the different types of taxes that congress is considering, but I believe an excessive tax always causes a diminishing return and often results in evasion of the tax itself. The most important thing we now have to do is to balance the national budget. The credit of any country, like an individual, is impaired when it borrows excessively."

O. W. ROSENTHAL, builder, said:

Three Important NEW HATS that score high in fashion

These flattering new styles will take the lead in the Easter parade. They're unmistakably authentic in every line of chic. "I think that congress made a serious mistake when it turned down the sales tax and is making another serious mistake in singling out wealth for the imposition of excessive taxes. By doing this wealth is practically set upon something criminal. We cannot have employment without expenditure and if you deprive those with wealth of their money you will reduce employment. Huge impositions on wealth discourage investment and thereby reduce the fields which provide employment."

Destroy Sources of Work.

EDWARD L. RYERSON JR., chairman of the Illinois unemployment relief groups: "I believe the action of congress in throwing out the sales tax is most regrettable as it provided the most equitable way of distributing taxes. Further, I believe that excessive impositions on wealth which tend to impair the financial position of our big companies is unwise because it will add to unemployment by drying up sources of work."

JOHN MCKINLEY, president of Marshall Field & Co.: "I think it is unfortunate that the sales tax provision has been voted out of the revenue bill. It would have been collected with comparative ease and with little realization of it by the people of the country. The idea that huge surtaxes, gift taxes, and estate taxes will produce revenue will prove wrong. The astounding fact that stands out in this entire tax discussion is the utter failure of public officials to realize the need of drastic reductions. People everywhere are tightening their individual belts, but not the governments."

A. W. HARRIS, chairman of the board of the Harris Trust and Savings bank: "I believe that the government could get more and get it more easily and equitably through the sales tax than through either high estate taxes or high income taxes or both."

L. B. MANNING, executive vice president of the Cord Corporation: "If you take away 65 per cent of a rich man's income, or even 40 per cent, you can bet your bottom dollar the wealthy won't put their money in productive enterprise. They will put their fortunes in tax exempt securities or send them out of the country."

BRUNDAGE SAYS CUSTER IS HAZY ON LAW MAKING

Former Attorney General Edward J. Brundage issued the following statement last night in reply to Omer Custer's assertion that the former attorney general wrote the state search and seizure act:

"Mr. Custer doesn't seem to have consulted with his sponsors, the Anti-Saloon league, when he says that I wrote the search and seizure law, nor apparently, notwithstanding his years in Springfield, has he become familiar with legislative methods."

"The attorney general does not draft bills for the legislature. His sole function is to pass upon their constitutionality when enacted into laws, and at the governor's request before the governor affixes his signature."

"I did not draft nor assist in drafting the search and seizure law, nor did I draft the Volstead act of which it is an adaptation. I do know that neither one is enforceable and I know that the people of Illinois have expressed their opposition to them. Several years ago I came to the conclusion Volsteadism was a failure and so proclaimed. The trouble with Mr. Custer is that he doesn't realize yet how the public feels upon this question."

GENTZEL CITES BENCH RECORD IN PLEA TO VOTERS

Horner Assails Igoe for Downstate Tactics.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Judge Robert E. Gentzel of the Superior court, candidate for the Republican nomination for attorney general, issued his first formal statement of the campaign yesterday. The nub of it was a pledge as to his conduct of office if he is elected.

With political activities virtually at a standstill because of Good Friday, statements were the order of the day in most head-quarters of the Gentzel expression was received with interest because, while he has toured a large part of the downstate territory, he has made few appearances on the stump in Chicago.

On Emmerson-Custer Ticket.

Judge Gentzel is a part of the Emmerson-Custer state ticket, having been selected for the attorney general's post by the Harding-Crowe forces during their efforts to develop a harmony ticket. This spot on the ballot was allotted to Cook county and George F. Harding strongly backed the judge for it.

"In commencing my campaign in Cook county," read the statement, "I desire to announce to the voters that I understand and appreciate the confidence the citizens of this county have reposed in me for the last twelve years."

"Beginning with the year, 1920, I was elected to the bench and have been continuously reelected since that period. I am also cognizant of the trust reposed in me by the legal fraternity, because in my judicial campaigns I have had the endorsement of the Chicago Bar association."

His Campaign Pledge.

"If nominated and elected to the office of attorney general I propose to give to the duties of that office the same conscientiousness, the same diligence, and the same regard for the interest of the public that I have given for twelve years and which led to public confidence and the approval of the Chicago Bar association."

"More than this no one can say because the office of attorney general is a great law office, the head of which should be animated by only one purpose, namely, an unflinching zeal to look after the public's interest."

"I shall at no time waver in this purpose and know I will conduct the affairs of that office in a manner reflecting the character of my administration of judicial duties during the last twelve years."

Cites Record on Bench.

"During my service as presiding judge in the Criminal court of Cook county, I always endeavored to be a truly impartial judge, and the records of the important cases which were tried before me and in which my decisions and rulings have been upheld by the Supreme court of this state, gives me confidence that the state's attorneys of this state will realize at all times that as attorney general I will follow the requirements of the statute and cooperate with these law enforcing agencies to the fullest extent possible."

"Citizens of Cook county recognize that it is of the utmost importance to them that they have a member from this county in the state official family. I believe it can be said without fear of successful contradiction that I am the only Republican candidate for attorney general from Cook county who is a serious contender at this primary for that office."

Horner Addresses Committee.

While there was no public speaking during the day, Judge Henry Horner, Democratic organization candidate for governor, talked to the Democratic county central committee informally on some phases of the campaign. Without mentioning his name, he criticized some of Michael L. Igoe's downstate campaign tactics.

"Downstate," he said, "I found that one of the reasons that downstate districts Chicago was that one of our candidates was inflaming the people of the state against Chicago and telling them that if Chicago paid its proper share of taxes the downstate taxes would be reduced one-third. He was holding up this prospect as a reason why the downstaters should support him."

"I do not resort to those tactics. I carried the banner of 'home rule for Chicago,' and I set it up downstate. It was the same way with prohibition. Other candidates were saying in certain places they were opposed to prohibition but they did not say it in dry counties."

"I stated my stand on that question in every county, whether it was a wet or a dry county. It may be that here and there I lost votes of some dry who have failed to realize the deterioration of their cause, but, thank God, I am able to return to Chicago maintaining my self-respect."

Butler Denies Statement.

Rush C. Butler issued a statement denying the authenticity of a statement issued in his name on Thursday from the headquarters of Edward J. Brundage. He said he had not been consulted about it and condemned it because it reflected on his "good friend, Gov. Emmerson."

"I am for Brundage for governor," he read in part, "and hope to see him nominated, for he is the only candidate who can defeat the man the good people of the state are hoping to defeat—Len Small. Statements of the kind attributed to me will not do the Brundage candidacy any good."

It was explained that attaches of the headquarters prepared the statement with the understanding that it would be submitted to Chairman Butler before it was issued. Through a misunderstanding, it was said, it was not laid before him. The statement said that gangsters had been given state jobs under Emmerson.

CANDIDATE

MISS DAISY SANDIDGE.

Miss Daisy Sandidge, 1510 Church street, Evanston, is the first woman in the history of the suburb to seek election to the city council. She is a candidate for the short term from the 5th ward, created by the council's action in ousting Edward B. Jourdan Jr., Negro alderman. Miss Sandidge was formerly chairman of her ward organization of the league of women voters, and revised the 1931 edition of the Illinois Voters Handbook published by the league.

2,000 PAY $1 FOR TRAIN RIDE TO UNKNOWN PLACE

(Copyright, 1932, By the New York Times.)
LONDON, March 25.—The Great Western railway started something entirely new in railroading today when a train plucked as the "Hikers' Mystery express" pulled out of Paddington station under sealed orders.

Travelers had not the least notion where the train was going. All they knew when they bought round trip tickets for $1 was that it would take them to some beautiful part of England. The adventurousness of the experiment, together with clever advertising, drew 2,000 Easter hikers to the station and the train had to be run in two crowded sections.

Just before starting time the engineer received secret instructions in a red sealed envelope. After an hour the hikers found themselves deposited at Pangbourne, on one of the prettiest stretches of the Upper Thames, where a return train met them in the evening.

Boy Is Killed When He Tries to Steal Train Ride

Alfred Max, 12 years old, 15230 6th avenue, Harvey, was sent to get medicine yesterday for his invalid mother. He came to Chicago without other members of the family learning of the trip. When they heard from him he was in the Illinois Central hospital. An Illinois Central suburban train had run over him at the 87th street station. The police report showed that he had fallen while trying to steal a ride on the train. Late last night Alfred died at the hospital.

3 Gunmen Invade Home; Get $250 and $1,280 Gems

Sidney C. Masser, 5552 Warwick avenue, and his wife were robbed of $250 and jewelry valued at $1,280 last night by three men who entered their home through a ruse. Masser is a lumber dealer and one of the robbers telephoned him he would like to talk about a purchase at the residence. When he arrived he was armed and had his two companions with him. Mrs. Masser and her two children were shut in a closet while Masser was robbed.

SWANSON AID CALLS FEINBERG CHARGES FALSE

Nonpartisan League Head
Replies to Judge.

Prompt answer to what he termed the "scurrilous charges" made by Judge Michael Feinberg was given yesterday by J. F. Cornelius, president of the Business Men's Nonpartisan League, which is supporting State's Attorney Swanson for reelection.

Feinberg, Cornelius said, accused him of accepting support for his organization from "crooked bankers," and with being a debtor to a closed bank. The Crowe-Harding candidate for state's attorney also said that Cornelius' real names is Wengierski. Cornelius is a north side real estate man.

Changed His Name.
The first two accusations are without foundation, Cornelius replied. As to his name, it originally was Wengierski, he said.

"Judge Feinberg says our organization is supported by crooked bankers," said Cornelius, taking up the charges in detail. "I defy him to show that we have approached or received aid financially or in any way from any one connected with a bank receivership, whether those bank officials were crooked or not."

"Judge Feinberg then makes the statement that I personally owe money to a closed bank. I do not owe one cent. At the time the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank closed its doors I had borrowed a comparatively small sum, approximately $1,500, having given this bank Foreman National bank stock as security. With the sudden closing of the Foreman bank, the stock became practically worthless, so I lost my entire investment. However, a few weeks ago I made final and full settlement with the Sheridan bank receiver.

Born Wengierski.

"Judge Feinberg led off his attack on me by saying that my real name is Wengierski. I was born Wengierski, went through Northwestern university under that name, and twenty years ago, by legal process, I adopted Cornelius as my surname, and this fact is well known to my friends."

"While on the subject of names," Cornelius concluded, "may I ask Judge Feinberg if he remembers a divorce action in 1911 in which M. Feinberg asked for a divorce, making sensational charges in his bill and acting as his own attorney. His real name was shown to be Michael Feinberg. The divorce eventually was granted to Michael Feinberg, not to Michael Fernberg. Could it be possible that our 'name caller' has himself changed his name?"

Swanson Issues Statement.

Referring to the report that his candidacy is being supported by Emanuel Eller of the "Bloody Twentieth" ward, State's Attorney Swanson yesterday issued the following statement: "I cannot understand what caused the break in the long friendship between Crowe, Feinberg, and the Ellers. I have neither asked nor had any understanding of any kind with either of the Ellers. This looks like some of Crowe's smooth politics."

Elgin School Board Cuts Employees' Pay 5 to 10 Pct.

The Elgin school board yesterday ordered a 10 per cent pay cut for all school employees receiving more than $1,400 a year, effective when the fall term opens next September. Employees receiving from $1,000 to $1,400 a year will get a 5 per cent cut. Those getting less than $1,000 a year will suffer no deductions. The pay cuts, without economies planned by the board, will save $85,000, it was estimated by Edwin F. Gardner, president of the school board.

CRUSADERS BACK BATTLE FOR WET G. O. P. DELEGATES

Assail Leaders Who Talk
Wet and Act Dry.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Illinois will be the "laughing stock of the nation" if it sends a dry delegation to the Republican national convention, said the Crusaders yesterday in applauding the movement launched by B. W. Snow, Republican county chairman, to elect anti-prohibition, anti-high cost of government, anti-Hoover delegates.

Seymour Wheeler, state commander of the Crusaders, put out a statement remarking that if other Republican leaders follow Snow's lead prohibition will start a slide down the toboggan. "The Crusaders," he said, "have always contended that no definite progress will be made in securing the repeal of the prohibition amendment until the question is taken up actively through party organizations."

Talking Wet; Acting Dry. "Here in Illinois, in fact most of the states, there is now no question that sentiment against national prohibition is at least 3 to 1—yet we have made but little tangible progress because politicians have talked wet and performed otherwise. Mr. Snow is showing the way out and the Crusaders are strong for his efforts."

"As far as we have information, he appears to be the only official of the Republican party organization, or any party organization, for that matter, who has taken a definite step to secure a delegation to the national convention which will be uncompromisingly for a wet plank in the platform and will oppose the nomination of an ardently dry candidate for the presidency."

"Now that Mr. Snow has shown the way, let other officials of the Republican party follow his constructive program. When this is done prohibition will be short lived."

"Let the leaders and lay members of the Republican party who favor the repeal of the prohibition laws take warning that in the event of the nomination of Omer N. Custer for governor the Illinois delegation to the national Republican convention will oppose a wet plank in the national platform."

"It would be nothing short of a tragedy for the state of Illinois, with its preponderant wet sentiment, to be represented at the Republican national convention in June by a dry delegation. It would make Illinois the laughing stock of the nation."

Snow Gets Response.

Meanwhile Mr. Snow reports that letters are pouring in from downstate asking how workers can help in selecting delegates to the national convention who will stand by the program and oppose the renomination of President Hoover and the insertion of planks against prohibition and against bureaucracy and government in business.

"The response indicates," says Mr. Snow, "that the people on the farms are ready for rebellion against a pussy-footing pro-Hoover delegation and they don't hesitate to say why."

Smoke Out Candidates.

CAROL SENDS HIS FLAMING BEAUTY BACK INTO EXILE

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

PARIS, March 25.—"The queen is dead! Long live the queen!" That is the real story behind the news from well informed Rumanian circles here that King Carol's chateau, Belleme, in Normandy, is being put in condition to receive a distinguished guest.

According to dispatches from Bucharest, the reconciliation between Carol and the lawful Queen Helen is now complete, and that the uncrowned queen, who has shared Carol's troubled throne for the last two years—Magda Lupescu—has been ordered back to the exile which she quit to join her royal lover. The red-haired chambermaid thus returns to the same chateau whence little less than two years ago she was summoned by Carol after he seized the Rumanian throne.

It is reported that Carol now has decided he values his throne more than the love of Magda. Since Bucharest, according to Helen, is too small to hold herself and her rival at the same time, Magda was sacrificed. She is expected here within two or three days, and by the king's orders will be sent to the lonely chateau, where she will be obliged to remain a virtual prisoner. According to reports, Carol ordered three of his most gallant courtiers to follow her into exile, so that she will not be too lonely.

MRS. CATHERINE CRERAR KOEHN MARRIES AGAIN

Husband Is Known to
New York Society.

Mr. and Mrs. John Crerar of 209 Lake Shore drive yesterday announced the marriage of their daughter, Catherine Hutton, to John Reginald Dane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Linwood Dane of Bedford Hills, N. Y., on March 19.

No details of the marriage were given beyond the announcement. Mrs. Dane, who is well known in New York society, had no comment to make except to say that she knew of the marriage. A servant in the Crerar home said Mrs. Crerar did not wish to be interviewed.

Wed and Divorced Twice.

Mrs. Catherine Crerar Otis Koehn Dane, now 24 years old, has been married three times and divorced twice. Her first husband was Ralph Otis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Otis. Their marriage in January, 1927, was an important social event. She was divorced in July, 1929, charging cruelty.

Her second marriage in April, 1930, to Frederick Koehn of Wilmette was a surprise to her family and to other members of north shore society. A few months later she went to Reno, where she obtained a divorce on grounds of mental cruelty.

Found Husband Jobless.

At the time of her divorce from Koehn her mother declared: "Koehn misrepresented himself completely. He told her he had a position with a New York brokerage firm, and after their marriage and arrival in New York he found he had nothing, not any kind of a job."

Political Notes

State's Attorney Swanson warned the public yesterday against unauthorized solicitors who were reported to be canvassing the city asking for campaign funds in his behalf. The only men authorized to receive campaign contributions for him, he said, are County Commissioner William Busse, Jacob D. Allen, and Noble Brandon Judah of the Great Northern hotel headquarters, Thomas J. Murray of the Hotel Sherman headquarters, and J. F. Cornelius of the Metropolitan building headquarters, 134 North La Salle street.

Walter E. Conway, candidate for Republican committeeman in the 50th ward against Committeeman Louis Nettelhorst, announced yesterday that two of his opponents, former Alderman A. K. Mose and Kenneth Brown, have withdrawn from the race and are supporting him.

Howard P. Savage, former national commander of the American Legion, recently elected business manager of the board of education, will preside tonight at the opening meeting of Attorney General Carlstrom's campaign in Chicago. It will be in Hagelin hall, Foster and Ashland avenues.

State Senator Harry G. Wright, Republican candidate for auditor, is receiver for four banks in his legislative district, but State Auditor Nelson's office explained that he receives only $50 a month from each bank.

The candidacy of Lewis Philip Holt for associate judge of the municipal court was endorsed yesterday by the Chicagoans' club, an organization of young business and professional men.

Bruce Campbell, Democratic candidate for governor, will come into Chicago tomorrow and will campaign in Cook county until the close of the campaign.

Dr. Edmund G. Brust, Republican candidate for coroner, was endorsed yesterday by the Sixth Congressional District Service Men's club.

State's Attorney Swanson will deliver an address to voters at 4301 North Harlem avenue at 10:30 tonight.

33 STATES WET BY OVER 2 TO 1 IN DIGEST POLL

than 4 to 1.

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—Thirty-three states have voted more than two to one for prohibition repeal, according to the latest returns in the Literary Digest's nationwide poll tabulated in the issue of the magazine out today.

More than 3,000,000 ballots have been tabulated. The states which have registered their anti-Volstead sentiments to date have a combined population of more than 85,000,000, according to the last census figures.

3,000,000 Mark Passed. The returns show eight of the states registering a vote of more than four to one for repeal. Of the 3,040,036 votes counted this week, 763,175, or 25.1 per cent, are dry and 2,276,861, or 74.9 per cent, are wet.

The only state in the bone dry column is Kansas. However, North Carolina comes very close to registering a vote for continuance of the eighteenth amendment. It comes within a fraction of 1 per cent of giving the dry law a favorable plurality.

Dry Vote Shows Gain.

The dry vote, too, showed a gain this week—the fifth consecutive one since the returns began coming in. This is the sixth tabulation and in the current vote it had risen to 25.10 per cent from 15.85 per cent in the second batch of returns.

New York lost its place as the wettest of the states to Nevada, the first returns from which show it to be 86.82 per cent for repeal. The District of Columbia was 77.91 per cent wet.

WHISKY BOTTLE ADDS KICK TO CHURCH SCRAP

Blame Janitor for Rogers
Park Controversy.

An inconspicuous janitor who objected to cigar stubs, broken windows, and a whisky bottle on the premises of the Rogers Park Congregational church, Morse and Ashland avenues, was pictured last night as the genesis of the dispute between church members over the recreational activities engaged in by the younger members of the church.

One group, headed by Dr. Forrest L. Knapp, head of the church's religious education committee, holds that the recreational program, which includes athletics, dramatics, and dancing, is too extensive, and in some ways subordinates the religious program. The other group, led by Dr. Howard Dabbs, 1607 Howard street, a physician, and for five years director of recreation at the church, upholds the recreational program. Dr. Dabbs has been asked to resign.

Disapprove Program.
"Dr. Dabbs was asked to resign because the committee does not approve his Sunday morning programs when much of the time supposed to be given to religious training has been devoted to athletic considerations," explained Dr. Knapp last night.

But Dr. Dabbs, who refused to resign, and who originally accused the adult members of the church opposed to the athletic activities of his class as being "old fashioned," raised his voice again last night. He mentioned the janitor, whom he declined to name. "The trouble really started two years ago," he said. "That was when I organized dances and athletics. The janitor learned that it added to his work to clean up after parties in the church auditorium."

Found Whisky Bottle.
"The janitor, wanting to keep up from causing him work, began collecting evidence. He found a whisky bottle in the men's room. I'm sure no young man left it there, but we could not prove it. The janitor complained of the cigar stubs all over the gymnasium and auditorium floors after we had met. One night he found some handles from punch cups in the yard. Another time some one from the outside hurled a hammer through a window. We'd changed musicians, and maybe some disgruntled musician did it."

Dr. Dabbs made other charges. He said that once the janitor collected the noise. But it was the married set, not the younger members, who had met that night, he asserted. Opinion was divided last night as to the outcome of the religious education committee's difference with Dr. Dabbs. Both sides had supporters. According to the committee's request, Dr. Dabbs is to resign tomorrow. However, Dr. Dabbs will appear before his class tomorrow, he said, and explain his stand. He may also tell about the janitor, he intimated.

2 Killed by Monoxide Gas While Repairing Autos

Two men were accidentally killed yesterday by carbon monoxide fumes from their automobiles. One, William Bluge, 29 years old, of 6515 South Seeley avenue, was found inside his passenger car in the Southwest highway, two blocks east of Harlem avenue. He had been repairing the machine from the inside. The second man, Daniel Piate, 31, of Palatine, was overcome in the garage in the rear of his house while repairing his truck.

Seek Identity of Woman Found Unconscious in Hotel

Police were trying last night to identify a young woman who was found unconscious Thursday with a chloroform soaked towel over her face in her room in the New Drake apartment hotel, 6352 Maryland avenue. The woman, under the name of Marie Hall, or Hill, was still unconscious in the county hospital last night.

SUPREME COURT WILL RULE ON $1,800,000 COUNTY RELIEF BILLS

The Illinois Supreme court will be asked to determine the validity of expenditures made by the Joint Emergency Relief fund before charity legislation, authorizing a $20,000,000 bond issue, was passed by the general assembly. This was decided yesterday when fund officials were informed that the state auditor did not obligate to meet bills aggregating $1,800,000 on the grounds that the new law is not retroactive.

If the legislature had been more prompt in passing the charity bill, the county would not have happened, officials asserted, pointing to the first request for aid which was made last November. The emergency legislation finally passed after the first of the year.

When Edward L. Ryerson Jr. and other officials of the fund realized that $10,500,000 raised in a public subscription campaign would not meet the demands, it was decided that the Cook county bureau of public welfare should carry on the relief work until the legislation passed.

By the time the program passed, the county had incurred three large bills—$500,000 for milk, $600,000 for fuel, and a like sum for other items. These are the bills the auditor refuses to meet.

"The county had no legal right to run up such expenses after the budget had been passed," Urban A. Lavery, special attorney for the county board, said.

At a meeting of relief fund officials with Lavery, it was decided to file suit in the Supreme court asking that the auditor be instructed to authorize payment of the bill. This action will be filed April 6. If the court rules against the county and the fund, the assembly will be requested to enact legislation to meet the debt.

Former Harvard Boxer Fined for Striking Boy

Robert Chapman, 22 years old, 651 Washington boulevard, Oak Park, formerly a member of the Harvard university boxing team, was fined $25 yesterday by Magistrate Frank Aring for striking a 15 year old boy who had snowballed him. The injured youth is Mark T. Adamson Jr., 220 South Euclid avenue, Oak Park. Adamson testified that the blows of Chapman had loosened his teeth and that it cost $300 to have them repaired. William Charters, 14 years old, 313 Wisconsin avenue, Oak Park, also has signed a complaint charging that Chapman struck him. His case will be heard later.

MUSIC STRIKE CAUSES BRIEF RIALTO FLURRY

Petrillo Objects to N. Y. Leaders.

A strike of musicians affecting only theaters controlled by the Shuberts in the Chicago district was called yesterday afternoon by James C. Petrillo, head of the Musicians' union. The strike ended last night after lasting four hours.

The short disruption had its comic elements. At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon an orchestra was rehearsing with a show in the Grand Opera house in Clark street. The show is to open tonight. Petrillo appeared and ordered the men to leave. They packed their instruments and departed.

Jake Shubert Retires.
"Here, here, here!" shouted Jake Shubert and John J. Garrity, his Chicago representative, who were in the theater. "What's all this about?"

"And the two of you can get out also," declared Petrillo, advancing with a scowl. Shubert and Garrity retreated.

Similarly, an orchestra rehearsing at the Apollo theater for a show which is to open Sunday night was ordered to leave. The Apollo is another Shubert theater.

Finds What Trouble Is.
Garrity and Shubert confessed themselves at a loss to explain the strike. Garrity visited Petrillo.

"Those orchestras at the Grand and the Apollo have got New York leaders," said Petrillo. "And they're trying to dictate what musicians shall be hired for the orchestras here. They're trying to tell us—Chicago musicians—what to do!"

"What do you want?" asked Garrity.

"Deport those New York guys,"

Chicago-Detroit-Cleveland—Overcast, probably some light rain, except fresh to strong near surface becoming mostly strong west to northwest over west portion.

Chicago-St. Louis—Mostly overcast, with some local light rain; strong southwest winds and gales, except fresh to strong near surface becoming mostly strong west to northwest.

Chicago-Twin Cities—Mostly overcast, probably some light rain, except rain or snow flurries north portion; mostly strong west to northwest or north winds preceded by strong westerly extreme south.

Chicago-Omaha-Kansas City—Broken to overcast, probably a few local light showers central and north portions; mostly strong north to northwest winds.

Route forecasts for twelve hours ending at noon:
Evansville-Atlanta—Clear sky near Atlanta and increasing remainder of route, probably light showers Saturday forenoon.

Cleveland-New York—Mostly cloudy sky, risk of showers near Cleveland Saturday morning; fresh southerly winds up to 1,000 feet and strong southwest, probably reaching sale force near Cleveland, and fresh southwest winds east of mountains at 5,000 feet.

said Petrillo. "Have Chicago leaders hire Chicago musicians."

The New York guys were dismissed and will be replaced by Chicago guys. Petrillo called the 35 musicians who figured in the strike before him. He told them to go back to work at 10 this morning.

The musicians' strike was over.

Reno, Nev., March 25.—(AP)—Mrs. Katherine Morse Brownley, New York society woman, filed suit here today to divorce George Wilbur Brownley on grounds of extreme cruelty.

DOCTOR AND WIFE IN A RACE WITH DIVORCE SUITS

Mrs. Miriam C. Fisher, 7020 Chapel avenue, and her estranged husband, Dr. George Carl Fisher, 7558 Kingston avenue, prominent physician, are engaged in a race to obtain service on divorce bills which each has filed against the other.

This became known yesterday when the physician's attorneys, Socrates & Davis, filed a divorce bill in the Superior court charging Mrs. Fisher with adultery. Two days ago she brought a similar suit in the Circuit court charging cruelty. Mrs. Fisher is the niece of Clifford Chickering, Pasadena, Cal., millionaire and retired president of the Chickering Brothers Piano company. Attorney Benjamin Davis said that the favored bill would be the one on which service first was obtained, since Dr. Fisher hitherto has not been officially notified of his wife's action.

The doctor's suit charged that his wife's acts of adultery occurred on Jan. 10, and that they were separated on March 15. The co-respondent was not named.

DEFENSE CLOSES IN MCGAHA TRIAL FOR DRY KILLING

Directed Verdict Denied by the Court.

Palatka, Fla., March 25.—[Special]—Relying solely upon the opinion that the state had failed to make a strong enough case for a conviction, the defense for E. H. McGaha, former Christian minister charged with the murder of John W. Malone, alleged stiller, during a raid on a liquor still the day before Christmas elected to abruptly close the case late this afternoon.

McGaha himself did not take the stand. A motion for a directed verdict entered by defense counsel was denied by Judge George William Jackson when the state closed its case this afternoon.

The state had shown that a line of buckshot had left visible marks on the shrubbery from the point where McGaha was stationed at the spot where Malone fell mortally wounded on the path to the plant, and that McGaha had admitted that if Malone was killed with buckshot he must have fired the shot since his was the only shotgun in the raid party discharged.

One witness testified that the shot could not have been made by a stumbling person. McGaha had claimed that his gun was accidentally discharged as he plunged forward in answer to a signal from a deputy.

Chinese Balk at Terms; Try to Walk Out.

BY JOHN POWELL.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

SHANGHAI, March 25.—The national government today received warnings from both north and south China against the conclusion of any agreement with Japan in settlement of the Shanghai question containing "humiliating" terms.

Twenty-two members of the Kuomintang central executive committee at Canton, including Dr. C. C. Wu, former minister to Washington, telegraphed the government that the Japanese terms, including the creation of a neutral zone, suppression of the boycott and recognition of Japanese special interests in Manchuria and Mongolia, must be opposed by continued armed resistance.

Agree to "Honorable" Terms.

The Cantonese leaders declared that they are not opposed to peace on honorable terms, but that they will soon issue a telegram to the nation urging united opposition to terms detrimental to China.

The warning from north China was from the Christian general, Feng Yuxiang.

It was due only to the efforts of Nelson T. Johnson, American minister, and Sir Miles Lampson, British minister, that the peace conference here was prevented from breaking up in a deadlock today. The Chinese delegates charged that the Japanese Gen. Kenkichi Ueda had refused to consider any withdrawal of Japanese troops from their front line positions until the expiration of a six weeks' period, when they Japanese agree to withdraw to what they term a "second line of defense," extending from Changku northward to Tszetzing forts. This line is only about five miles behind the present line.

Reject League Resolution.

The Japanese refused to consider withdrawal to the border of the international settlement of Shanghai, in accordance with the league of nations resolution, until after the expiration of a long period.

The Japanese report regarding today's conference merely said: "Good progress had been made when the meeting adjourned." But according to the Chinese report, Quo Tai-chi, Chinese delegate, when he learned that the Japanese will not consider any withdrawal before six weeks and then only to a second line, started to leave the meeting. Johnson and Sir Miles persuaded him to remain and continue the discussions, which are scheduled to reopen tomorrow.

The Japanese minister, Mamoru Shigemitsu, offered to use his influence to induce the Japanese military to adopt a more conciliatory attitude, but the Chinese declared that it is useless to continue the conversations in event the Japanese army continues to act as though it is an army of occupation and only consents to withdrawal at its own pleasure.

Population Drops 820,000.

The Chinese municipality reported tonight that more than 820,000 Chinese and 2,000 foreigners had evacuated the Shanghai district since the beginning of the conflict.

T. V. Soong, Chinese finance minister, in an article published in the People's Tribune, a Kuomintang organ, today declared:

"From the welter of smoke over the undeclared war around Shanghai two elemental facts stand out in stark relief as incontestable and fundamental."

"First. The well-being and existence of the nation rests only on the strength of its armed forces and"

"Second. The complementary fact" that China, with proper equipment and organization, is fully capable of defending its country.

Law of Jungle Rules.

"We were told that war between nations was no longer possible and that after the 'war to end war,' with ten millions killed and fifty millions wounded, it would be unthinkable. We also were told that international conventions, such as the covenant of the league of nations, the Washington nine power treaty and the Pact of Paris fully guaranteed weak states against foreign aggression."

"In order to prove herself able to survive as a nation China must become adept at slaughter. She must put national defense above all else, above public education, commerce, industry, democratic rule, and civic rights. In fact, above all other considerations, for survival is still the first law of nature. We have the human material in ample numbers and only require the proper organization and equipment to build up an army which will ultimately command the respect of the world."

Report Manchuria Peace Move.

HARBIN, Manchuria, March 25.—(AP)—The Rengo (Japanese) news agency reported today that Gen. Ting Chao, leading the Chinese insurgents in Kirin province, had made peace overtures, just as the Japanese Manchurian army was surrounding his troops.

He sent a delegation here with an offer to surrender, Rengo reported, and promised to disarm and disperse his troops.

A Rengo dispatch from Changchun said a Japanese air squadron had bombed Tongking Cheng, thirty miles south of Harbin, and that Japanese troops expected to enter the town tonight.

JAPAN MAY QUIT LEAGUE; CHARGES IT HINDERS PEACE

Government Ponders Way to Break with Geneva.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

TOKIO, March 26 (Saturday).—Two Tokyo newspapers, the Nichi Nichi and Hochi, today featured a report that the Japanese government, especially the ministries of war and foreign affairs, is inclining noticeably in favor of withdrawing from the league of nations.

It is held by many government officials that the league is a white elephant instead of a palace of peace and also that Japan would be able better to "contribute to the peace of the world" if it were not for the "unnecessary interference from the league."

Nichi Nichi said that a lack of knowledge by the league of the situation in the far east and efforts of the minor powers to make the league a stronghold of their security at the expense of the other members are the chief reasons for the Japanese anti-league argument.

Threatens "Drastic Action."

Regarding the question of practical procedure, Nichi Nichi reported that in some government circles formal resignation from the league is favored, while in others withdrawal of Japanese representatives from Geneva is advocated. The latter course would amount to an immediate break with the league.

Nichi Nichi quoted Sadao Araki,

SENATOR W. A. CLARK'S DAUGHTER SUES N. Y. CENTRAL FOR $250,000

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—

Mrs. March C. De Brabant, socially prominent in New York and Canada, and the daughter of the late United States Senator William A. Clark, has brought suit for $250,000 damages against the New York Central railroad and the Pullman company.

The suit is for injuries which Mrs. De Brabant says she suffered on Sept. 12, 1927, when she was thrown from her berth on a New York Central train from Montreal to New York.

She alleges that a defective safety strap, used to protect sleeping passengers against falls, broke when the train rounded a curve while "traveling at an excessive speed" and that she was injured when pitched out of her bed to the car floor.

Mrs. De Brabant inherited $15,000,000 from her father, Marcus De Brabant, a descendant of the Belgian De Brabants, was formerly assistant traffic manager of the Union Pacific railway. He is Mrs. De Brabant's third husband.

war minister, as saying that Japan is determined to make the Manchurian incident the last disturbance to permanent peace in the orient and, therefore, should the league or any other party stand in the way of far eastern peace, Japan will have to consider drastic action.

He also declared that in case the league investigating commission's report fails to enable the league to see the far eastern situation in its true perspective, the league will be denied its right of dealing with peace in the far east.

Hochi declared that Japan should break with the league, but should continue relations with the various powers, as it is done by the United States and Russia.

JAPAN'S CABINET RECONSTRUCTED; CRISIS AVERTED

(Copyright: 1932. By the New York Times.)

TOKIO, March 25.—The reconstruction of the cabinet was effected today. Kishiburo Suzuki, minister of justice, was transferred to the key post of home minister.

Takeji Kawamura, former governor of Formosa, succeeded Suzuki as minister of justice. Kawamura and Suzuki were Suiyoku (government party) insurgents, but they now profess to be satisfied that Premier Inukai will not try to make cabinet changes in the future without consulting the party factions.

Kaku Mori, chief secretary of the cabinet, who brought the matter to a head, is expected to withdraw his resignation, which was tendered privately.

These maneuvers can be understood when it is realized that Japanese parties are really blocs under various chieftains, who, like feudal lords, expect rewards in proportion to the number of their followers. The prospect of an immediate change of cabinet has now been averted. Japanese observers think that if the cabinet keeps together until the middle of May, when the next session of the diet is held, it may last for a considerable time.

Dentists... are proud of their own teeth

They don't want you to lose yours either. They warn you to care for your gums.

To take a look at most dentists, you might be inclined to think that they had chosen the dental profession because they could boast fine, sound, perfect teeth themselves. Your dentist would laugh at such an idea. He knows that his teeth are good and yours will be good—if you start, as he did, to care for your gums in time.

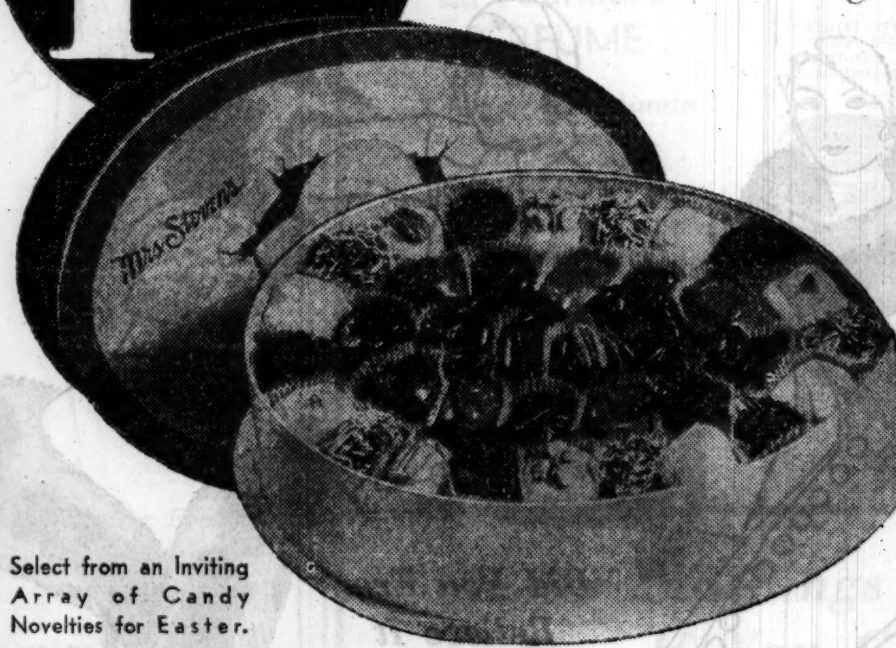

More than half of the adult teeth lost are due to that dread gum infection, pyorrhea. When it starts, you never know—and it may take five years, ten years and even longer before it causes the loss of even one tooth. The right time to watch your gums is now, right now.

It doesn't pay to ignore pyorrhea. You simply must have professional dental advice about twice a year and when you take up seriously the home treatment of your teeth, it will pay to use a toothpaste perfected by a dentist. Dr. R. J. Forhan devoted a lifetime to pyorrhea treatment. His professional formula is embodied in Forhan's Toothpaste. It's the finest toothpaste money can buy, with an extra-protection feature in its special formula. Don't let pyorrhea get started. Use prevention. Use Forhan's. Use it twice a day—old and young. It's never too early to start the children on Forhan's, the double-duty toothpaste, at all drug stores.

WARDEN OPPOSES CLOSING OF JAIL SUMMER SCHOOL

A plea to keep school open at the county jail during the summer was made yesterday by Warden David Moneyppenny.

The warden said he planned to send to each member of the school board a letter explaining the value to society in keeping his school open twelve months of the year.

Warden Moneyppenny revealed that he is in receipt of a letter from Charles J. Lunak, assistant superintendent of schools, which states that due to decreased revenues, all summer schools, including that at the county jail, will be closed in 1932.

"For the boys who aren't in jail, a summer vacation is a good thing," asserted Warden Moneyppenny, "but the jail school is about the only diversion the inmates have. Many of them have never had a chance for an education and they study eagerly in our school."

Warden Moneyppenny pointed out that, since it only takes one teacher to operate the jail school, the cost item doesn't loom up large on the school budget.

HAWAIIAN COURT
SETS FORTESCUE
TRIAL FOR APRIL 4

Darrow Hints He May Need More Time.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
HONOLULU, March 25.—The trial of the Fortescue-Massie murder case was set tentatively today for Monday, April 4, by Circuit Judge Charles S. Davis. Clarence Darrow, Chicago criminal lawyer, who arrived yesterday, informed the court that the defense might need another week for preparation, but that he would seek no technical delays.

Mr. Darrow will defend Mrs. Granville B. Fortescue, American society matron; her son-in-law, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, and two naval enlisted men, Albert O. Jones and E. J. Lord, who are charged with second degree murder. All have pleaded not guilty to the charge of lynching Joseph Kahahawai, Hawaiian, who, with four others, was accused of raping Mrs. Thalia Massie, wife of Lieut. Massie.

Darrow Heads Defense.
Darrow will be assisted in the trial by George S. Lelsure of New York. Lieut. Johnson of the naval legal department, and Montgomery Winn, local attorney. Lelsure is a law partner of William (Wild Bill) Donovan, former assistant attorney general.

The prosecution will be in charge of Public Prosecutor John S. Kelley, former Montana lawyer. His assistant will be Barry Ulrich, Harvard law graduate.

Twenty-six names were drawn as prospective jurors to try the case today. Racially, the panel consists of ten Anglo-Saxons, one Japanese, four Hawaiians, nine Chinese, one Portuguese, and one Filipino. Under the law each side now has 24 peremptory challenges, although the defendants must be tried by a mixed jury. The men are from many stations of life, from a Chinese elevator operator to an American bank manager.

"Unwritten Law" Plea.
Darrow will map the case for the defense after consulting his clients at Pearl Harbor. He said today that he will bring the whole story of the rape of Mrs. Massie into this case if possible, which indicates an unwritten law plea, coupled with some sort of emotional brainstorm as in the Harry K. Thaw case.

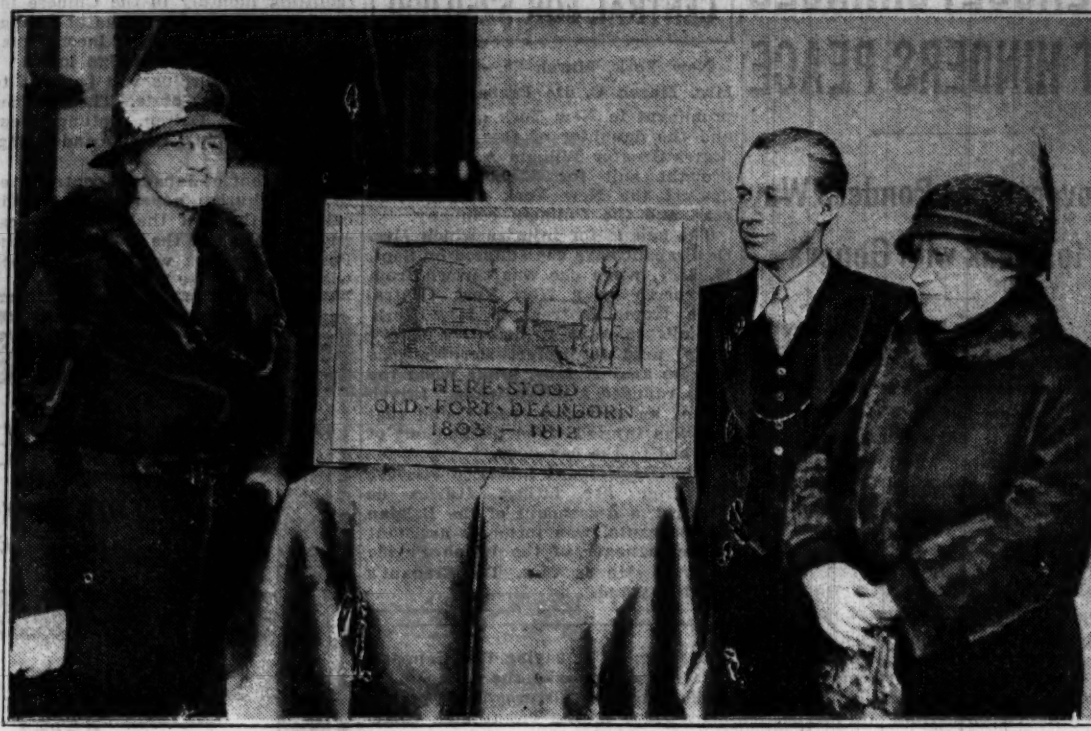

As the trial phase of the murder case is entered Honolulu finds itself in the midst of the most bitter political and social cleavage since the days of the royalist-annexationist division forty years ago.

While the rape of Mrs. Massie and the resulting murder of the Hawaiian remain the subjects of raging gossip and debate and furnish a situation weird beyond the dreams of fiction, the underlying issue, which is alienating friends, races, and neighbors, is whether this people shall go on toward increasing self-government and eventual statehood, or whether it must revert to a permanent colonial status or something hybrid in between, with all its wings of soaring citizenship clipped.

Storm Clouds Meet.
The Massie case and its revelations of a unique vice problem in Honolulu followed by assaults on two other white women and three native women have been the overt acts which have given those who favor a strong commission government their best talking points in years, and have driven the other side to the desperation of calling for a vigilance committee and violent action to prove their horror of such acts and their capacity to deal with them. It is the meeting of long gathering storm clouds, with a refreshing rain in prospect.

The cleavage centering about these cases is not primarily racial, although the brown masses here with their secretive thoughts have been led to one side, the Hawaiian home rule side, while the whites are divided, particularly the women, who are entering the situation in groups of extremist views. The politicians, with their eyes on the racial vote, are warily sitting on the fence. They are naturally, however, for a "hands off" policy, for any action by congress toward greater federal control here destroys their political machines built around elective officeholders.

The Hawaiian party is composed of several distinct elements, with one goal but actuated by various motives. There is a white business element in it, depending on continued native co-operation and afraid of a sudden and disgruntled citizenship. These tolerate the long arm of Uncle Sam but that is about all. They feel that the islands should be let alone, and they speak disparagingly of the navy at every opportunity, seeing in all this uproar about rape merely an army and navy plot to get their long cherished ambition to take over control of these islands.

Hope For Conviction.
In gossip they attack Mrs. Massie bitterly and hope for the conviction of Mrs. Fortescue and her naval son-in-law. They assume without warrant that the Ala Moana rape suspects are innocent, victims of navy and police persecution. In this party are the "haole haters," many of whom are whites, men who have turned against their own people and government.

There is another element in the Hawaiian party, more high minded, idealistic in part, including church and pacifist groups, who have been preaching the gospel of the ideal melting pot for years and now cannot bear to see it boil over in such a mess.

They speak of the many fine qualities of the Japanese and other Asiatics being merged into this new citizenship, and are willing to go ahead to the point of statehood on such a base. They have shut their eyes to many things. This group is headed by former Gov. Walter Farrington and includes the present governor, Lawrence M. Judd, and takes in many of the old time residents, descendants of the missionary régime.

Trade Leaders Split.

Those who control trade and industry, the "Big Five," and all their satellites, are divided as they were in annexation days. Those who favor the strong commission government of "carpetbaggers" are not doing so openly, although they whispered into the ear of Assistant Attorney General Seth Richardson when he was here. This group is supposed to be led by the admirals and generals of the service, but they are not talking either, and it is all a sort of fear complex, a threat which came nearest to being voiced by Mr. Richardson when he told the members of the "House of the Lords of Heaven," the legislature, that they must demonstrate their capacity for self-government within the next few months or expect to have this responsibility taken away from them.

Leadership in the legislature has rested until this session upon the shoulders of big, blustering Senator Charles Rice, son of a pioneer family of Kauai island and county, who has a large Japanese constituency. His antagonism toward Washington interference on dictation has been marked and he is accused of blocking reform bills which might have prevented the development of the present situation, such as taking the chief of police and the county prosecutor out of politics.

The legislature reflects political racial lines at present, but does not show the rising strength of the Japanese vote. The senate has four Hawaiians, 6 whites, 3 Portuguese, one white Hawaiian, one Chinese-Hawaiian (cousin for the Ala Moana rape defendants), and one Chinese. The house has 8 Hawaiians, 9 whites, 3 Japanese, 5 Portuguese, 3 part Hawaiians, and one Negro.

Mistrial Is Predicted.

Some sort of mixture such as this will necessarily have to be drawn in the Fortescue case jury, although that case will not be decided along racial lines, for there are many whites who condemn her, and Hawaiians who shake their heads in sorrow for her and would not convict her. There is no public feeling discernible as to the outcome of this case, except that there is no demand for her acquittal, but also an apparent reluctance to have her convicted. Every prediction is for a mistrial, but conviction of some of the defendants is not at all impossible.

INDIAN MYSTIC
GULPS POISON AND GLASS; DIES

RANGOON, Burma, March 25.—(AP)—Narasimha Swami, an Indian mystic who thought he could swallow poison and other noxious substances with impunity, died today a martyr to his own faith.

He was a Hatha-Yogi and believed that by virtue of exercises based on autosuggestion and breath control he could swallow broken glass, deadly poison and nails without the slightest ill effect. He had given demonstrations at Calcutta and Madras and appeared here today before a group of scientists and physicians.

He swallowed nearly a quart of the deadliest erosive poisons and then ate a handful of broken glass. Two hours later he said he felt ill. In another hour he was dead.

THIS IS PAYDAY FOR WORKERS OF

Other Employees to Get Wages Next Week.

Forest preserve employees will receive two weeks' pay today, amounting to $50,000, for the first half of January. Maurice Kavanagh, chairman of the county board finance committee, also announced that the 4,000 county employees and 1,875 pensioned mothers would be mailed two weeks' checks next Wednesday, the employees for the last half of November and the mothers for the first half of December.

It was stated that the payments are made possible by the sale of $475,000 tax anticipation warrants by Assistant Controller Michael J. O'Connor to the First National bank and the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company.

Wants Scrip Taken Up.
As a partial solution of the legal tangle over school scrip, Master-in-Chancery John C. Lewis recommended yesterday, that the board of education exchange 1931 tax anticipation warrants in small denominations for the $8,060,955 worth of "scrip," which was issued in payment of salaries. The tax warrants will bear 6 per cent interest from the date of their issuance. These recommendations will be presented today to Circuit Judge Philip Finnegan who recently participated certificates illegal and ordered the board to cease distributing them.

The question of the interest which has accrued upon the participation certificates since their issuance, and that of the interest due to school board employees who refused to accept the certificates instead of cash in payment of their salaries, was reserved by Master-in-Chancery Lewis for further hearings.

The issue of the legality of scrip was raised in a suit brought by the Chicago Teachers' federation.

Treasurer on the Job.

The majority of the public offices the city were closed yesterday for Good Friday. County Treasurer McDonough's office remained open to accommodate 258 persons, who paid $40, $13 in personal property taxes and 1,693 others who paid $354,649 in real estate taxes. The office was also open St. Patrick's day, when 3,768 persons paid $711,472.21 in taxes.

The treasurer issued a statement warning property owners to make the 1930 real estate tax payments at once in order to avoid confusion and congestion in the last minute rush on the deadline date of April 15.

Recorder Clayton Smith also kept regular office hours. A total of 1,143 documents were filed, on which the recording fees were $2,443. The office was also open St. Patrick's day. City Collector Kaindl was a third official at work. He took in $31,000 in special assessments, $9,496 in vehicle licenses, and $5,469 in other fees. His office also was open March 17.

DEPOSITORS GET DIVIDEND.

Kewanee, Ill., March 25.—(Special).—By order of State Auditor Oscar Nelson, Receiver Robert M. Campbell of the Union State Savings Bank and Trust company was today permitted to release a 15 per cent dividend to 320 depositors, amounting to $88,150.41. The bank closed Sept. 19, 1931.

FRANCE, BRITAIN SEEK CURE FOR CENTRAL EUROPE

Tardieu Accepts Bid for Parley with MacDonald.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
PARIS, March 25.—Two important diplomatic developments, marking the new orientation which French foreign policy has been given by Premier Andre Tardieu occurred today.
First, the reopening of naval negotiations between France and Italy was definitely established by a long interview which the Italian ambassador, Count Gastano Manzoni, had with Tardieu this morning. No official communiqué concerning the subjects discussed was issued, but well informed circles are convinced that preparation for a renewal of the talks over the naval question was envisaged.

Tardieu to Visit MacDonald.
The second development of importance was the acceptance by Tardieu of the British suggestion that he come to London soon after Easter for a meeting with Prime Minister MacDonald. The outstanding questions to be discussed are the proposed Danubian economic pact and the stand to be taken by the creditor nations at the forthcoming Lausanne conference next June on German reparations.

The British government yesterday proposed a conference of French, British, Italian, and German representatives to consider the proposed Danubian pact prior to direct negotiations among the five Danubian nations—Austria, Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, and Czechoslovakia.

Danubian Situation Is Explained.
(Copyright 1932: By the New York Times.)
PARIS, March 25.—Even more than reparations, the problem of what is to be done to reconstruct the Danubian countries has become the dominant political pre-occupation of Europe.

The suggestion, first made by Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and immediately put into form by Premier Tardieu of France, is that Austria, Hungary, Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia should seek some freer method of commercial exchange to hasten their recovery.

Apart from the various governments directly or indirectly concerned, two other bodies have been in recent weeks concerning themselves deeply with the immediate situation and the future of Europe's most disorganized section.

Trade Body Calls Parley.
The financial committee of the League of Nations, in making recommendations for immediate relief, urges strongly in its report to the league council that much more than these immediate measures must be undertaken if the situation is to be definitely improved. The international chamber of commerce has summoned a conference of delegates of the interested states to be held at Innsbruck next month.

In the opinion of experts of both these bodies, the situation of all the Danubian countries is desperate. They have gone on record that the sickness of eastern Europe is one of the principal causes for the general unsatisfactory state of the whole continent, economically and financially.

The political side of the problem has suddenly assumed great importance. Germany and Italy have both

GUNMAN HUNTED AFTER HIS SHOT KILLS WOMAN

Bari McDowell, 40 years old, a former union business agent of Kansas City, Mo., was the object of a city-wide police search last night as the slayer of Miss Dorothy Evelyn Renshaw, 23 years old, a divorcee of Sioux City, Ia. She was shot and killed early yesterday in a beer flat at 5214 Winthrop avenue when McDowell, who was intoxicated, became angered over a radio program and fired at the radio set and struck her.

Sumnerdale police revealed last night that McDowell was at one time business agent for the Tile Setters and Terrazzo Workers' union in Kansas City. He has a police record, they said, according to Sgt. Patrick Barrett of the detective bureau McDowell once shot at his wife, but missed her. The police rounded up two witnesses last night. They are Andrew Johnson and Edward Clark. A third one, Ed Jacobson, is being sought. Another man, Frank Taggart, owner of the beer flat, is being held with Johnson and Clark as a witness.

To avoid this division of Europe into separate camps, the British government seemed to have desired that there should first be a meeting of the "big four."

Stress Common Interest.
In the British note which was handed to France yesterday it is understood strong emphasis was placed on the common interest of all in the restoration of prosperity to this part of Europe and the necessity to avoid national aims which would inevitably be at the expense of the Danubian countries.

In explanation of what the situation of these countries is, one need only point to the railroad line between Budapest and Cernowitz, which crosses six frontiers in 450 miles, with a customs barrier at each frontier. Because of customs examinations, the express trains between Vienna and Cracow, a distance of less than 300 miles, take three hours longer than before the war.

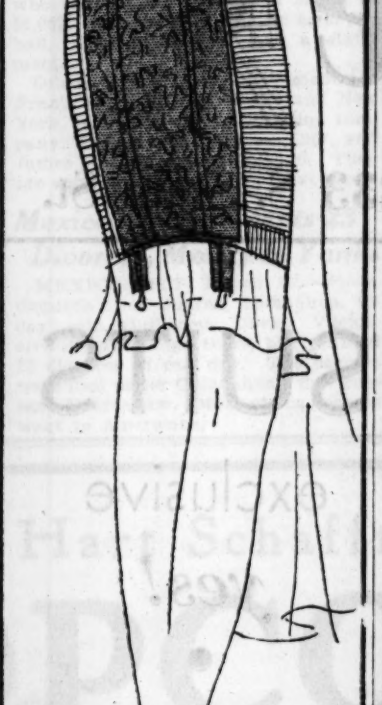

Fears Ex-Pals Will Kill Him, Thief Tells Judge

Harold Chapman, 44 years old, who turned state's witness against three men engaged with him in the looting of parked automobiles, pleaded yesterday against a sentence to the Bridewell, where his three confederates are. "They will kill me," he told Municipal Judge Justin F. McCarthy. "They'll kill me there." Judge McCarthy refused his plea and imposed a two year sentence and a $200 fine.

NO WONDER THEY FIGHT FOR WARD COMMITTEE JOB!

He Is Important Cog in Party Machine.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The governor's contest may set the limelight on the top of the primary ticket, but the real job in which the party battlers are most interested is that of ward committee men, each of which is a cog in the party machinery. These are the men who nominate the candidates for Circuit, Superior, and Supreme court judges (who are inside direct primaries), pick the delegates to the state conventions which in turn choose delegates at large to the national party conventions, nominate candidates for presidential electors, and for university trustees, and adopt state platforms.

The committee men, thus is the officer who determines the policies of his party, Republican or Democratic, and its official stand on the issues of the day. His arm reaches to Washington. He distributes the patronage if there are any jobs to give out and he belongs to the controlling bunch, and he is supposed to be the grand arbiter over protection and privileges in wards where privileges may exist, although in best circles this is not mentioned.

Battles on West Side.

Small wonder, then, that the competition for the jobs is keen. The west side has its full share of the battles.

Edward F. Moore is candidate for reelection as Republican ward committee man in the 30th. He was deputy commissioner of public works in the old city hall regime and is a west park commissioner. He is supporting Custer for governor and Swanson for state's attorney. Four years ago he was nominated for sanitary trustee, but was beaten by Ross A. Woodhull, Democrat. Mr. Moore has six opponents, but it is not regarded as much of a fight and headquarters report he is expected to win easily. His opponents are Robert R. Siegel, Arthur Webster, John Clark, Ernest C. Kaminsky, Roy W. Williamson, and Albert J. Benedict.

Clark Has Six Rivals.

On the Democratic side Ald. John S. Clark, chairman of the finance committee of the city council, has six rivals. Chief of them is Robert J. Brennan, a Board of Trade man, who is making an energetic race. Others are: John Brennan, James T. McNulty, Joseph B. Sherry, Frank Ennis and Edward Forsyth.

The 31st has a Republican mixup. Daniel A. Roberts, attorney for the west park board, is with Custer and Swanson. Louis M. Greene with Carlstrom and Feinberg. Park patronage is expected to aid Roberts. Others are Max Luster, former Municipal judge; Erling L. Wernes, Otto F. Borch, L. H. Ellison, Arthur W. Lund, George Kurfirst, and Edward Deming.

Kaindl Is Opposed.

For the Democratic Committeeman Edward J. Kaindl, city collector and former alderman, has two opponents, William Turner and Raymond D. Dunning, but says he is losing little sleep. Daniel D. Coffey, superintendent at Dunning, is seeking reelection as Republican committeeman in the 32d. He is for Custer and Feinberg. His opponent is George M. Roscynski, who is listed for Small.

On the Democratic side Leo Kocalski is the organization choice for reelection. He beat Stanley H. Kunz last time. He is also running as the organization choice for congress in the Eighth district, against Mr. Kunz, former congressman, whose contest against Congressman Peter C. Granata, Republican, has recently been reported on favorably by a house committee. Both Kocalski and Kunz are running for committeeman and for congress. Edward John Czekala is the Igoe choice for committeeman. Others are Walter J. Gorski and Salvatore Marrazzo.

John T. Dempsey in Race.

In the 33d John T. Dempsey, a Republican candidate for Appellate court clerk, seeks reelection as Republican committeeman. When elected last time he was the youngest man on the county committee. He was five years an assistant state's attorney, three years an assistant attorney general. He is with Custer. Opposing him is Adolph C. Becker, who is backing Small. Two years ago Dempsey beat Becker. A third candidate is Theodore Toole.

For the Democrats Clayton F. Smith, county recorder and managing chairman, is regarded at headquarters as an easy winner. His opponents are Emil Grabowski, Walter Menzarski, Francis J. Seibler, and Stanley P. Nowicki.

The old 36th, 37th, and 38th wards under the new map have been cut into the 34th, 35th, 36th, 37th, and 38th wards, and in this area the Republican fight is largely between the followers of Robert E. Crowe, former state's attorney, and some of the present committeemen.

Six Running in 34th.

Committeeman George Hiltman, an old timer in the 34th, is backing Custer, despite the fact that Gov. Emmerson gave him his old job as state grain inspector to Andrew C. Metzger of the 8th. Otto A. Bomark is the Crowe candidate, backing Carlstrom and Feinberg. The Densen entry is Harry E. Hoff, candidate for county recorder in the Republican primaries. Hoff is a son-in-law of the late Joseph F. Haas, the greatest vote getter the Densen camp had, and for twelve years chief deputy recorder. Other candidates are Nels J. Nielson, Thomas E. O'Malley, and Conrad J. Lippert.

On the Democratic end Neal E. Kelley, organization choice for reelection as committeeman, is opposed by Robert E. Dougal, Raymond A. Libby, Elmer Johnson, and Fred Douglas. Frank R. Ringa, former alderman, the Crowe entry, is backing Carlstrom and Feinberg, and is a candidate for Republican committeeman in the 35th. Frank Peska, a former city prosecutor in the old city hall regime, is with Custer. Peska, it is said, has the advantage of patronage. Ringa is an undertaker, and the M. V. L. once reported that he sought to get the council to allow the use of sirens on hearses. Others are Joseph J. Lenox, William F. Winter, James A. MacLagan, former president of the Logan Square Kiwanis, and Anton J. Hoyka, a merchant.

Winicki Up for Relection.

Leo J. Winicki, an attaché of the county treasurer's office, is running for reelection as Democratic committeeman in the 35th. He has eight opponents and is the organization pick. The eight are Edward M. Carney, Frank Skowronski, Tom Jasinski, Peter J. Klein, James D. Shannon, Patrick Carney, Leo D. Baker, and Leo J. Tadych, a Democrat of the old school, a friend of the late Roger Sullivan, and a former sports editor.

In the 36th Edna T. Brekke, Republican committeeman, is with Custer and Swanson. He is a member of the west park board and secretary of the northwest park district. Herman J. Heineman, a former attaché of the board of review, is the Crowe entry, backing Carlstrom and Feinberg. A strong fight is being put up by Arthur M. Romme, publisher of the Austin Booster, a community paper. He was born in Chicago of Norwegian-American stock and has lived in the district for twenty years.

Other candidates are Thomas H. Landise and Earl E. Heymann. For the Democrats, Committeeman Harry Kohl is opposed by Edward J. Finan, who is backing Igoe for governor, and by Thomas Monahan, C. E. Wilson, John J. Callahan, Francis E. Dalton, and Peter J. McCann.

Complications abound in the 37th ward. Timothy J. Crowe, who was convicted in connection with the "whoopie era" of the sanitary district, of which he was president, is running for reelection as Democratic committeeman. He is opposed by Congressman James T. Igoe, who was brought out by a group of independent Democrats headed by Ald. Wiley W. Mills. Originally 25 candidates filed for the primaries, but 15 withdrew, leaving in the field, besides Crowe and Igoe, Frank P. Melvin, Patrick J. Dalton, Joseph T. Barton, James C. Mulen, Arthur T. Spring Jr., Harold Wolfe, Sigmund Dublin, and Louis W. Gertenrich. The talk at county headquarters is that Crowe is likely to win.

G. O. P. Has Mixup.

The Republicans have a mixup. John R. McCabe, former city clerk, has the Crowe backing and is supporting Carlstrom and Feinberg. William F. Galling, who has been the impresario of 24 political movements since the Bull Moose days in 1912, is with Brundage. He is organization manager of the Brundage campaign. Francis A. Horrigan, a friend of W. R. James, president of the west parks, is for Custer.

Mr. James withdrew as a candidate. So did Ninian H. Welch, the Densen entry. James H. Taylor, former alderman, is among the candidates close to the Crowe camp. Other candidates are Helmer C. Patterson, Andrew Helgeson, Earl S. Kanter, Ragnar Benson, John Edwin Wagborne Jr., and James Downey.

CHURCHES HOLD SOLEMN RITES ON GOOD FRIDAY

3 Hour Services Mark Christ's Crucifixion.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

With solemn rites in hundreds of churches of almost all Christian denominations, Chicago yesterday observed what some historians say is the 1,900th anniversary of the crucifixion of Christ. Quiet multitudes thronged Catholic, Episcopal, and Protestant churches for the three hour services commemorating the three hour agony of the Cross. In most churches this service began at noon. For factory and office workers "tre ore" services were held last night in a number of Catholic churches in addition to the day services.

The three hour observance originated in a Jesuit mission church in South America. Shortly after its introduction there it was taken to Spain, but was not instantaneously popular in that country. It was then introduced in the United States where it has been received with devotional enthusiasm by many communities. Some leaders state that the three hour service is now the point where Christendom is more united than at any other.

Many Businesses Close.

Each year recently has shown an increasing tendency to close business offices, factories, and schools at least during the three hour period on Good Friday. Yesterday Chicago's public and parochial schools, Stock Exchange, and Board of Trade were closed the entire day. A three hour service was conducted at the Chicago temple under the auspices of the Chicago Church federation, representing nearly 1,000 Protestant churches and nineteen denominations.

At this service, where the meditations on Christ's seven last words from the cross were delivered by seven of the city's leading clergymen in the presence of a large assembly, the Rev. J. P. O'Donoghue, pastor of St. Patrick's, presided.

"Forgiveness," said Dr. Stone, "is one of the hardest demands of the Christian life. In this prayer on the cross, Christ gave an example to mankind of the greatest evidence we may reveal of Christian love—not in overlooking the sins of others, but forgiving them."

United services were also held in a number of communities within and near the city. In Rogers Park seven denominations united in St. Paul's Episcopal church for the three hour devotions. A similar service was held in St. Augustine's Episcopal church, Wilmette, with the Rev. Dr. Hubert Carleton in charge.

Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago told his Good Friday congregation at the Garlick theater yesterday noon that business men may console themselves in depression periods with the fact that on the cross, Christ gave an example to mankind of the greatest evidence we may reveal of Christian love—not in overlooking the sins of others, but forgiving them.

"Pain and human suffering," said Bishop Stewart as he pointed to Christ's death on the cross, "is the consequence."

Italy Mourns Christ's Death; Thousands Kneel at Cross

ROME, March 25.—(AP)—Italy mourned tonight the death of Christ with traditional Good Friday ceremonies, picturesque processions, prayer, and silence.

In St. Peter's, Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, presided over the "Miserere" and "Tenebrae" mourning services. At their conclusion the clergy sang with their prayerbooks on the kneeling benches to represent the confusion of nature at the death of Christ.

Pope Attends Services.

Pope Pius XI. attended services in his private chapel, with prelates of the pontifical court.

The titular churches of Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago and Cardinal Hayes of New York—Santa Maria del Popolo and Santa Maria in Via, respectively, both dedicated to the Virgin Mary—held "Maria Desolata" (Mary desolate) services. These consisted of a sermon on the Virgin's sorrows, the rosary, and hymns.

Tens of thousands flocked to the little town of Grassano, near Florence, where the Italian equivalent of the Oberammergau Passion Play was given. It was called "Gesù Morto," or "Jesus Dead."

"Gesù Morto" began with an enormous procession representing the tragic journey to Calvary. Under a black canopy was a figure of Christ lying on a bier borne by a dozen peasants.

Kneel at Crosses.

The procession wound up an adjoining hill. On the summit three huge crosses rose among the cypresses. The throng knelt around the crosses and prayed. Afterwards came the traditional blessing of farm animals. Horses, oxen, and sheep were led into the village chapels and marched up to the altar. There priests blessed them with holy water.

At Merano, near the northeastern frontier, hundreds of men carried large wooden crosses in procession tonight. The women bore flowers. All the buildings along the line of march were illuminated.

Throughout Italy all theaters and places of amusement were closed tonight.

Depositors of Closed Bank to Receive $45,000.

State Auditor Oscar Nelson yesterday announced that 900 depositors of the closed Hegewisch State bank, 13358 Brandon avenue, would receive a 15 per cent payment of $45,000 within a week. On Thursday the auditor announced that the depositors would receive a 10 per cent payment. The amount was boosted when Morgan L. Fitch, receiver, collected an additional $15,000.

STRIKE IN SPANISH PROVINCE GROWS; UTILITIES BOMBED

MADRID, March 25.—(AP)—A strike in Orense province against suspension by the government of work on the Orense-Zamora railroad was spreading today. Forty-three city councils had resigned.

Many telephone and telegraph poles were dynamited, interrupting service. Police seized a dozen bombs and arrested 17 persons.

Deputies from Galicia, in which Orense province is situated, informed Premier Azana that a government subsidy of $1,875,000 would be sufficient to continue construction of the railroad, instead of $3,750,000 originally requested. The national assembly budget commission agreed to appropriate $1,500,000 to continue work on the railroad for three months, pending a solution of the situation, and it was believed the strike would end as a consequence.

MAIRA HITS BACK AT RASKOB OVER 1928 FUND SUIT.

New York, March 25.—(Special.)—Timothy J. Mara, widely known sports promoter and one of the defendants in the Democratic presidential campaign deficit suit, today struck back at John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, in a statement issued through his attorneys.

Responding to Mr. Raskob's statement of Wednesday, Mr. Mara accused the national committee chairman of "a lack of knowledge of politics," and said the situation is due to Mr. Raskob's desire "to have himself recognized as the only chairman who was able to bring the committee out of debt."

Mr. Mara, owner of the New York Giants professional football team, along with Patrick J. Kenny, Yonkers plumbing contractor, is one of a group being sued for a total of $70,000 by the County Trust company on notes signed to underwrite the Smith campaign deficit.

DEFIES CHICAGO RACKETEERS; HIS TRUCKS SMASHED

Paul Wendland, head of the Wendland Trucking company of Milwaukee, reported to police of that city yesterday that Chicago labor racketeers had chopped the radiators out of two of his trucks on Wednesday, while they were in a garage at 1501 North Halsted street.

According to Wendland, he had been ordered to join the Chicago branch of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stevedores and Helpers. He refused to do so, offering to join the Milwaukee branch, which has smaller dues. The company does an extensive haulage business between Milwaukee and Chicago and he was told that his drivers must be registered here "or take the consequences."

N. Y. TAXPAYERS CALL A HALT ON SPENDING ORGY

City Told What It Must Do to Retrench.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
New York, March 25.—[Special.]—The largest property owners of this city served notice this afternoon that there must be a drastic reduction in the cost of running the municipal government and that the retrenchments must be made at once. Their demands included a 10 per cent cut throughout the ranks of city office holders and employees, a higher subway fare, the elimination of overlapping departments, and a return of all money saved to the taxpayers.

With the threat of a major tax strike hanging over their heads, members of the city administration agreed to a series of conferences on municipal economy to begin Monday, and said Mayor James J. Walker would endeavor to return to town from Hot Springs, Va., in time to meet the civic and realty leaders.

Lay Down Ultimatum.
Eighty representatives of twenty-nine leading property owners' organizations met in the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce this afternoon. They spoke for the owners of billions of dollars' worth of real estate—and they spoke in direct, definite terms regarding the city's budget of approximately $700,000,000. This is the program they adopted to take to the city hall next week:

1. Substitute 50 year bonds for the present four year securities issued to pay for the subway now under construction or not yet in operation.
2. Establish a self-sustaining fare on all subway lines.
3. Reduce the salaries of all city officials and employees earning more than $1,200 annually by 10 per cent.
4. Make a reappraisal and revaluation of all property for assessment purposes. In order that the new figures may more accurately represent the true value of the property.
5. Ask refund to taxpayers.
6. Shift a part of the burden of supporting city colleges by requiring students to pay tuition.
7. Eliminate the money unnecessary city officials and employees.
8. Credit all money saved by the city through the adoption of any one or all of these recommendations to the taxpayers on the second half of the 1932 taxes which become due Nov. 1.

The resolution was adopted unanimously except for three Manhattan groups—the Broadway association, the West Side Chamber of Commerce, and United Real Estate Owners. Spokesmen for these organizations explained they were in accord with the program but did not vote because they had their own proposals to submit to the administration.

Statement Is Issued.

George S. Horton, president of the Brooklyn real estate board, presided at the meeting. At the conclusion of the following statement, in which a tax strike was alluded to but not mentioned directly, was issued:
"It is not surprising that the excessive tax burden placed upon property owners and rent payers of New York City has given rise to radical and drastic suggestions which are designed to force the city to curtail expenses. However, we are opposed to any movement that would impair the credit of the city and seriously affect the public generally in all walks of life."

"It is our firm belief that the city officials should take immediate action to make adjustments which would afford material relief to the overburdened taxpayers."
Mr. Horton was authorized to name a committee of three to call upon Mayor Walker Monday and request him to fix a definite time for a conference with him to make the situation of the city and real estate organizations at this meeting."

At the conference the previously mentioned definite demands for economy will be presented to the mayor and immediate action will be asked.

Tammany In Quandary.
The demand for a salary cut and for a higher subway fare brought the Tammany officeholders up with a jolt. They are the two things the administration cannot survive.

A 10 per cent salary cut would save approximately $31,500,000. There are 147,557 office holders and employees in the city government. There is the equivalent of one employee to every ten families. The 1932 budget carries salaries and wages aggregating $312,000,000 and employees paid from other than budget funds represent a payroll of approximately $3,000,000. On this basis the average wage of a city employee is $2,120 a year. A 10 per cent reduction would leave the average wage $1,908.

A wage cut, however, would antagonize about half a million persons if the families of the employees are counted, and Tammany could not hope to overcome the loss of such a number of "in the bag" votes.

Fare Raise Political Bomb.

The minute the subway fare climbs from 5 cents to 7 or 8 cents the administration in office is going to begin looking for the nearest exit. The anger of the voting strap hangers has never been measured in this city. Such a fare boost would awaken the non-property owners to the realization that they have been paying for the politicians' extravagance all along.

Threats and counter threats filled the air today as the move for a concerted tax strike bubbled toward the boiling point. The West Side Taxpayers' association announced that it was taking the lead in advocating a strike. Frank W. Demuth, president, said the taxpayers should expect little from the city and that substantial relief could be obtained only through a general strike.

Act to Prevent Foreclosure.

To prevent mortgage holders from foreclosing property on which taxes are unpaid, Mr. Demuth's organization specified that owners shall deposit with the mortgagee the amount of the tax plus 7 per cent interest for the year from May 1, 1932, the fund to be paid to the city at the expiration of the year unless authorized sooner by the owner. Mr. Demuth said this would safeguard the mortgagee.

One high city official who would not let his name be used said real estate men supporting a tax strike faced the possibility of criminal prosecution. He said such persons, acting in concert, would render themselves liable to charges of criminal conspiracy to obstruct the proper administration of the city's laws. The official threatened to seek grand jury action against the sponsors of the tax strike.

The administration leaders are known to look upon the proposed

SCHOOLS' COST OF OPERATION IS HIGHER THAN N. Y.

Almost Double Per Pupil, Figures Show.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

In comparison with the New York public schools, Chicago has been spending an excessive amount for business administration, operation of plant and maintenance of school buildings, and at the same time spending a relatively small amount for instruction.

The expense figures for both cities are available for 1930. New York had a daily average attendance in regular day schools for that year of 967,971, as compared with 429,347 for Chicago. Measured in pupils, Chicago has a school system 44 per cent the size of New York's. But Chicago spent 80 per cent of what New York spent for the operation of plant.

Figures Are Compared.
To operate the school houses for 967,971 pupils, New York spent $3,558,553.09, while Chicago spent $6,859,315.82 to operate schools for 429,347 pupils. These figures indicate that it cost nearly twice as much per pupil to operate the Chicago schools as the New York buildings. The per pupil cost in Chicago was $16.97 as compared with $8.84 in New York. For 1932 the Chicago board has authorized the expenditure of $7,176,207 for the operation of plant.

On maintenance of plant Chicago has been just as liberal. While Chicago's pupils are only 44 per cent of New York's, Chicago in 1930 spent 88 per cent as much as New York in the maintenance of plant. In money New York spent $5,264,566.75, while Chicago was handing out $4,628,587.72. In a word, Chicago spent $10.78 per pupil for the maintenance of its school buildings, while New York got along with only $5.43.

Less for Education.

Of course, when Chicago spends so much on business administration, operation and maintenance of school buildings it has less to spend on educating the pupils. For instruction, which includes the salaries of teachers, principals, supervisors, and the cost of text books and educational supplies, Chicago spent only 34 per cent as much as New York. While New York was expending $115,911,419 for this purpose Chicago was spending only $39,063,870.

On business administration of the schools Chicago spent 86 per cent of the amount expended by New York. Chicago spent $1,210,411, while New York got along with a cost of $1,405,396.

Price of Warrants Declines.

For 1932 the Chicago school trustees have passed a budget calling for the expenditure of $90,180,263, despite the fact that no one was able to show how so much cash can be obtained this year.

The performance of the school trustees in budget making, as well as that of other local governments, has aided in discounting the value of tax anticipation warrants outstanding. The buyers of these appear to believe, as time runs, that not enough taxes will be collected to pay the warrants, and the selling price of the warrants is steadily decreasing accordingly. Yesterday's quotations from Otis & Co. show the following prices on warrants of various local governments:

CITY OF CHICAGO.		—1932—

It will be noticed that the lowest price quoted for any of the warrants is for those of the board of education. The board will meet Monday to discuss what it will do about the scrip which was issued before Sept. 1 last.

Detroit Hopeful of Refunding Debts and Interest on Them

Detroit, Mich., March 25.—[Special.]—Mayor Frank Murphy today stated that the city would not default on its bonds; that such a move would be both unwise and unsound. He plans, however, to ask the banking creditors of the city to refund not only maturities coming due, but interest as well.

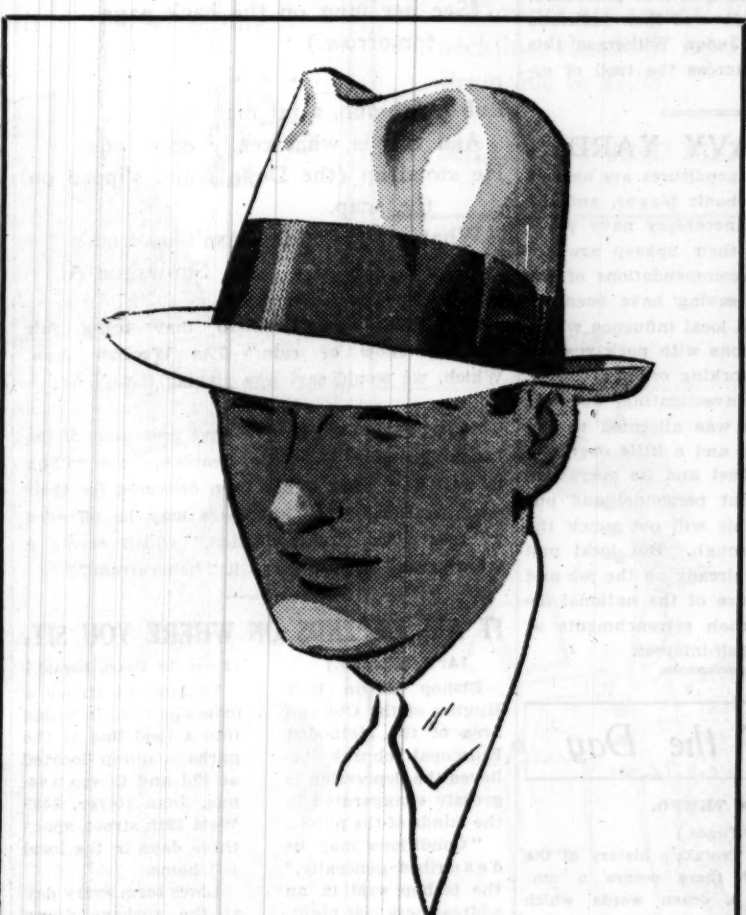

This plan, the idea of United States Senator James Couzens, former mayor of Detroit, to refund the city's debts, which mature to the amount of $1 million dollars during the coming fiscal year, took a forward step this afternoon when Mayor Murphy, following a conference with Ralph Stone, chairman of the finance commission and direct representative of New York bankers; Controller Roosevelt, and Corporation Counsel Wilcox announced that the attitude of the New York bankers is much more favorable than when the refunding plan was first proposed, a month ago.

Fight Against Repudiation.
The plan late today received the approval of Mr. Stone. It calls for the refunding of both maturing principal and interest on city bonds, as a tax reduction measure. Mr. Stone at the same time strongly disapproved any repudiation by the city of either interest or sinking fund charges on bonds.

"There is nothing more certain than if the city defaults it will be utterly impossible to sell refunding bonds," Stone said. "So the sooner the thought of defaulting is abandoned the better able the city will be to handle its present perplexing financial problems."
"One of the most important points is that the city's credit must be maintained in every way," the mayor said. "This means a continuance of the policy of economy and aggressive ac-

Mexican Troops Capture 10 More Train Attackers

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
MEXICO CITY, March 25.—Ten members of the party which attacked the Mexico City-Laredo, Tex., train last Sunday were arrested today by federal troops under the command of Juan B. Vargas. Vargas will submit the prisoners to court martial. Within the last month several attacks have been made by armed groups on trains and automobiles on public highways and a warrant has been issued by the government that all found guilty of such attacks will face a firing squad. It is almost certain that the new prisoners will be executed.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

WARNING FROM AN EX-PRESIDENT.

Mr. Coolidge's article on debts and taxes, published in the Saturday Evening Post, is free from the rhetorical periods which its facts would justify and is nevertheless as momentous a warning as the American people have ever received from any man who has occupied their presidency. Restraints are imposed on an ex-President when his party still has the administration of the country and he is available for a pending nomination desired by the President in office. Mr. Coolidge is not the man to ignore them and does not in this article.

What is ignored by both parties in congress in making the tax levies and by the administration in conducting public affairs is that the costs of federal, state and local governments have ruined the country.

Mr. Coolidge presents the figures and from them the conclusion that the total public debt is $30,000,000,000, with total taxes of $10,251,000,000 and total expenditures of $13,048,000,000. The public outlay is thirty dollars a thousand, at least half of or more than half of a fair return on capital.

Capital may have an alien sound to the average man, as something out of his life, but it is the source of his living, whatever he is doing, and when taxes take one-half, three-fifths, or two-thirds of the return of money at work the average man need not be astonished if he himself is out of work.

One-fourth of the available cash of the farmer, Mr. Coolidge says, is taken by the costs of his local governments. The federal government subsidizes the farmer and does not tax him, but, nevertheless, he goes broke trying to support the governments he is supposed to control directly. The other side of the picture, the industrial side, is seen in the tax story of the railroads. In six years the railroads paid in taxes just eleven million dollars less than they paid in dividends.

The tax levying governments are not dealing with an emergency but with a disaster. They are not facing hard times but ruin. There is hardly the slightest sign in Washington, in the states or in the cities that the persons responsible for public expenditures give a damn for the consequences. The Chicago school board wants $90,000,000 and already owes the employees $30,000,000. The federal government faces a deficit of $4,000,000,000 and demands increased taxation for increased expenditures. Wherever there is a tax body there is a blind cormorant.

THE ULTIMATE HYPOCRISY.

When the house of representatives had disposed of the sales tax provisions of the revenue bill there remained the taxable item of wine and grape concentrates for an estimated yield of $46,000,000. That no doubt might be entertained of the purpose of this levy as a tax on prohibited beverages an exemption was made of malt preparations used in baking. The house left under taxation only such articles as the congressmen could be reasonably sure would be used for purposes illegal under the Volstead act.

Legitimate uses of the compounds and preparations were exempted from the levy and only the clearly anti-prohibition articles were left to provide the $46,000,000 anticipated from this particular tax. The citizens of the United States, denied the use of any beverage containing more than one-half of one per cent alcohol, are relied upon by congress to buy the compounds for illegal beverages to such an extent that the treasury will receive the sum noted.

The incredibility of such a legislative performance, of such candid and profitable hypocrisy, must, in addition, submit to the fact that the same congress votes $11,369,000 for the use of the department of justice in its attempt to prevent the manufacture of such beverages as will be taxed for $46,000,000. Further, the total expenditure for the prohibition of this source of government revenue is estimated at $40,000,000. The government's net profit out of a shameless transaction is only $6,000,000. For that it sells its honor as its common sense, refusing to permit the legal manufacture and sale of a light beer which would yield from $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 in excise taxes.

BROOKS FOR STATE TREASURER.

C. Wayland Brooks, assistant state's attorney in Mr. Swanson's office, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for state treasurer. He is an able young man whom a wise body of voters would give every encouragement to seek a political career. He had a war record of wounds and citations which revealed the type of American whose qualities of citizenship are relied upon in war and peace. He has not himself rested upon this record as a qualification for peacetime public service, but it is to be allowed his supporters to refer to it as one evidence of character. Mr. Brooks will prefer to be judged by other qualities. He has proved himself a public prosecutor of the highest grade. He is familiar with the elements of politics and he knows, from the experience of a prosecutor has, the sources of political and social evils. There are indeed few prospects so promising in Illinois Republican ranks as this candidate, new to state politics, who offers himself to Republicans for the state treasury. If the people of the state are ever reasonably to expect that public service will attract a grade of men desirable in office and worthy of trust for ability and good purposes such a candidacy as that of Mr. Brooks will get encouragement and such ambitions will be rewarded.

CRIME AND THE WILKERSON APPOINTMENT.

In his telegram to Senator Borah, chairman of the senate committee now considering the confirmation of Judge Wilkerson's appointment to the Circuit Court of Appeals, the president of the crime commission, Mr. Loesch, has performed an important public service with characteristic courage and public spirit. He has illustrated with force the inevitable relation of organized criminality to the fate of Judge Wilkerson's promotion, and apart from that controversy he has presented again to the law abiding citizenship of Chicago and the nation an analysis of the system which so successfully flaunts law and justice.

Whether the influences resisting the elevation of Judge Wilkerson succeed or not, Mr. Loesch's true picture of the workings of organized criminality and corrupt politics must, it seems to us, have a substantial effect in crystallizing public opinion and giving practical direction to the public revolt against existing conditions. The interrelations of professional lawbreakers, labor and business racketeers, and corrupt politicians, in and out of office, are a network entangling and defeating justice, substituting an invisible government for that which the laws establish and the people support. To understand, first, that this government exists, and second, how it works, is the necessary preparation for its destruction. It has not been easy to expose it to view, for it operates in a world of which the law abiding citizen knows nothing directly and can only see in its manifestations occasionally. But Mr. Loesch has exposed it strikingly in his summary as Mr. Seabury in New York has exposed it in his report. That the opportunity to punish Judge Wilkerson for the telling blow he delivered against the system would be neglected by its controlling agencies will not be believed by any one who has come to realize the power and operations of allied criminality and political corruption. And however sincere labor leadership may be in its resentment against some of Judge Wilkerson's injunctions in years past, the fact remains and cannot be ignored that the interest of this alliance to penalize him is clear. The defeat of his appointment will be a victory for the powers of crime and political corruption.

As for the injunction issue, THE TRIBUNE has been no defender of the abuses of that procedure, but has attacked them and favored their judicious restraint. In the case of Judge Wilkerson this issue is a herring drawn across the trail of organized crime.

UNNEEDED NAVY YARDS.

Proposals for reducing expenditures are as welcome in congress as the bubonic plague, and the prospects of cutting out unnecessary navy yards or even cutting down on their upkeep are not bright. Repeatedly past recommendations of the navy department for this saving have been refused while wire pulling and local influence which have loaded the appropriations with pork year in and year out are still in working order. A subcommittee is now investigating, but last year eighty million dollars was allocated to the shore activities of the navy and a little over one hundred millions for the fleet and its operation. It has been proposed to cut personnel and put ships in reserve, and as this will not touch the pork barrel it may go through. But local pull for useless expenditures is already on the job and retrenchments at the expense of the national defense are more probable than retrenchments at the expense of organized self-interest.

Editorial of the Day

THE RUSSIAN TEMPO.

[New York Times.]
In the opening chapter of Trotsky's history of the Russian revolution of 1917 there occurs a single sentence of less than a dozen words which provides a truer perspective for the five year plan than is to be found in many an entire volume dealing with that subject. Trotsky is developing his philosophy of history, which boils down to the simple contention that it is not necessary for a backward nation in transforming itself into a modern industrial state to pass through every stage in the process which the industrial pioneer countries have traversed. A backward nation may cover the ground by leaps, accomplishing in years what its predecessors have taken decades to achieve. Trotsky finds that in the history of Russia there have been several periods of such accelerated speed progress, of which one is quite recent. "Between the first revolution [the one in 1905 after the war with Japan] and the world war industrial production in Russia approximately doubled."

Just how much progress the five year plan has registered is a highly disputable matter. In the rough industries, coal mining and petroleum, it has shown notable gains, but for production as a whole it has hardly gone beyond the pre-war record. Even if due allowance is made for the concentration on industrial plants to the neglect of consumers' goods, there is food for thought in the fact that general production apparently increased more rapidly in eight years before the world war than in fourteen years of bolshevist Russia.

This reminder from no less a person than Trotsky is a warning against the habit of speaking of the soviet accomplishments in terms of the miraculous. When the Turkestan railroad was opened a few years ago soviet enthusiasts in this country could not say enough about this unprecedented feat of the bolshevist government in railroad building. But putting aside the fact that the "Turkistan" railroad was planned and begun by the czarist government and was about one-third completed when the war broke out, the worshipping of the soviet miracle touch quite forgot a sizable enterprise like the Trans-Siberian railroad, put through twenty years earlier in proportionately much faster time than the "Turkistan." But of course the chief lesson of Trotsky's point of order is for the headlong commentators upon our own economic system who have been driven to the conclusion that we will have to surrender our ideas of democratic liberty in order to secure the benefits of communist efficiency. Trotsky reminds us that after 1905 the mere temporary breath of liberty accorded to the Russian people was enough to stimulate an industrial evolution fully as impressive as the one recorded by the soviet experiment at such enormous costs, physical and spiritual.

HABITS FOR FAT PEOPLE.

R. L. H. NEWBURN thinks that these people are fat because they eat too much. The normal appetite of such children would have made them stop eating before they took too much, as is the way of the God-given, normal appetite. But mothers make the child's food too appealing. Presently his desire to eat more because he tastes good enough the child to disregard old man natural appetite, when he says to the child: "Stop eating. You have enough." Probably mother is somewhere nearby trying to induce her child to eat a little more because of her dread of undernourishment and her fear of its consequences.

Presently the child has acquired new food habits based on artificialness. Now he eats for the pleasure of eating, or in order to get a feeling of fullness in the stomach. Being a child, with nothing else to do, he plays hard enough to burn up the surplus and no obesity appears to warn the parent that the new standards of eating are not based on the body's needs. Then, for one reason or another, the child's natural appetite will not stick. Until the person has lost all desire to eat the quantities of food and of the quality he formerly consumed he will be in danger of going back to his old food habits, and when he does he will go back to his old fat.

Most fat people eat until they have a certain sense of fullness. This they call satisfying the appetite. This is a false standard, but the man who is thoroughly trained on that basis can lose weight if he will fill his stomach with low caloric value. But eventually he must train himself away from that desire for the "fullness" feeling, if the cure is to stick. Fat people who tell you they are small eaters Dr. Newburn finds to be the most consistent of all prevaricators. They often kid themselves, and they are most ingenious in kidding others. He has had indifferent success in reducing people of this class unless he puts them in a hospital and can regulate the food intake with no possible breaks.

One woman insisted she ate no dinner, which was true, but she forgot to say she ate a half pound of nuts and candy at her daily bridge game. A girl insisted she ate no breakfast and no lunch. When the facts were uncovered her menu was as follows: Breakfast: Banana, cereal, eggs, devil's food cake or butter cake, a glass of milk. She ate no lunch. She ate candy instead. At 3 p. m., having had no lunch, she ate some rolls or apple strudel and a glass of milk. Supper: Chicken soup with rice, gefilte fish, carrots, celery, mashed potato, lettuce and tomatoes, bread and butter, apple sauce, a glass of milk, and a dessert.

BUACH FOR SILVER FISH.

REPLY.
This group of bugs are known as silver fish moths. They eat book bindings and do some harm in a few other ways. They are fond of starch and glue wherever they find it. Books kept in a dry, well aired place are somewhat protected therefrom. Sprinkle fresh boric acid around rather freely. This is the best of the silver fish, potatoes. Librarian mix white arsenic with glue or starch paste, put it on bits of paper, and leave these in places where the moths abound.

REPLY.
Certain kinds are, for instance, pattern baldness. Not keeping the scalp clean, insufficient brushing of the hair, wearing tight or heavy hat gear, age, and certain skin diseases are other causes.

CHINA-JAPAN WAR, 1894

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 2.—It is announced here that the investment of Port Arthur by the Japanese forces by land and sea has been completed and that the forward movement of the Japanese armies in the direction of Mukden is being rapidly pushed.

It is added that a portion of Field Marshal Count Oyama's force is attacking Kin Chow on the Gulf of Liaoting, which is occupied by Chinese troops.

SEANGHAI, Nov. 2.—The native papers announce that the Chinese troops have retaken Kiulien Cheng after heavy fighting. The Japanese are said to be being driven out of that place with a loss of 3,000.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 4.—Advices received here from the front show there has been heavy fighting in the country just north of Port Arthur. It is reported that Field Marshal Oyama divided his forces and while one division landed on the east coast of the peninsula north of Tallenwan another effect a landing near Kin Chow, which is a walled town. Kin Chow was immediately attacked and the outer defenses were carried by the Japanese in the hour of fighting. In the meantime the Japanese fleet which had convoyed the transports opened a heavy fire on Tallenwan and Kayen-ko. Covered by the fire of the ships the land forces captured Tallenwan in a brilliant fashion. Field Marshal Yamagata's army continues its victorious march. The division under Gen. Tatsuami captured Fung Wang Ching. The enemy was scattered and fled in the direction of Takusan and Hotenfu.

TIENTSIN, Nov. 4.—Fung Wang Ching was burned by the Chinese before the evacuation. The defense of the port to Mukden has collapsed. The Japanese cleverly effected a landing at Kin Chow while making a demonstration against the opposite coast of Shantung.

MARCH 26, 1916.

COLUMBUS, N. M.—American troops engaged in an encompassing movement with Carranzistas near Naniquap today got their first sight of Villistas. There was no fighting between the bands and the Carranzistas forces, but the Carranzistas fought two battles with other bands, reports to Gen. Pershing's headquarters stated. The pursuit was continued in a snowstorm. The bandits sighted by the Americans were a small body, and it is not known whether Villa himself was among them. The reports to headquarters gave their location as 120 miles south by southeast of Dublin.

MONTEREY, Mexico.—A special train from Torreon, bringing women and children of the American colony there, passed through here. The women were seated on the floor of a box car, protected by a line of trucks. The guard on the train engaged in a running fight with a large number of bandits who rode along for several miles from Prevelon to Santa Nina. Villistas were on both sides and attempts made to burn the bridges. The attack of the bandits was foiled by the prompt arrival of cavalry under Gen. Matias Ramos.

LONDON.—Eleven of the twenty-five known Americans on the channel steamer Sussex, which was torpedoed while crossing the English channel from Dover to Calais yesterday, have not been located at a late hour tonight. The official report from the French ministry of marine does not attempt to state how many persons lost their lives, but it is estimated that at least fifty were killed. The disappearance of these twelve Americans, which was closely followed by that of four others on the freighter Englishman, which was sunk yesterday. The dead Americans on the Englishman are P. Buckley, M. A. Burke, G. MacDonald, and P. McDonald.

MALADJUSTMENTS.
Chicago, March 23.—City dwellers, busy with their affairs, have been surprised by this last depression. But those in smaller towns and on farms foresee it as the inevitable result of fifteen years of price readjustment. The best shoes used to sell for $5 to $7 when prices brought $2 to $3; now the same class of shoes costs $10 to $15 and hides bring only 75c to $2. Good food bread used to be made of 15 wheat; now 10c bread is made of 50c wheat.

Farmers and stockmen, thus losing their purchasing power, have become bankrupt, because the prices paid them for raw materials have no equitable relation to the prices they, as consumers, must pay for various finished products. This bankruptcy dragged down first the small manufacturers, bankers, and merchants directly dependent on the producers. These are now dragging down larger businesses in industrial centers.

If we, the American people, are to accept the making of an equitable relation of prices on all commodities. Either prices paid for these raw materials must go up or prices on all other commodities must come down.

AN OLD MERCHANT.

YES.
Chicago, March 18.—I have been a reader of your paper for the past twenty years. I want to take this opportunity to thank you and your staff for the splendid work you have done in fighting for the repeal of the prohibition act. It has no place in real American life.

Could I at this time take the liberty of asking you for your opinion on the following question? This is the question: If we, the American people, are to be successful in having the liquor question placed before the individual states of the Union for their own decision, could the congress of the United States (and world congress) protect the American grain grower and fruit farmer from the competition of the foreign liquor interests, so as to enable the American grain grower, etc., to reap the benefit of his own labor by passing a law prohibiting the importation of foreign spirits for a period of at least seven years? I know that that will mean foreign entanglements, but haven't they had enough the last fifteen years?

The question arose as a result of a group discussion in a hotel. I put forth the question. I am a wet—although I don't drink. BERNARD R. HENNES.

HERE'S AN IDEA.

Chicago, March 19.—As a ready means of relieving our teachers from their financial condition, I would suggest that the city hold a public auction of goods unnecessarily purchased by its different governing bodies such as automobiles, Italian lace table cloths, Chippendale chairs, cradles of a hotel, etc. American articles too numerous to mention, applying the proceeds of this sale toward the teachers' salaries. By doing this the city will accomplish a double purpose—that of relieving the teachers' immediate needs and increasing their personal property assessors as to the true cash value of such articles when sold as second hand goods. G. A.

EVANSTON'S WITNESS.

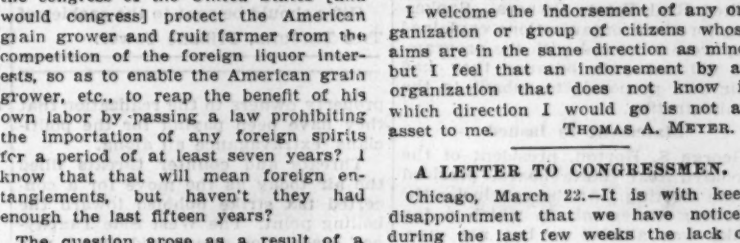

Evanson, Ill., March 22.—So "Evanson, cradle of the W. C. T. U. votes wet," etc. Figures from the Literary Digest to prove it? I happen to reside under the same roof with 13 to 14 other voters. To my certain knowledge one of these voters was not a wet, and that to a voter who is doubtless in accord with the sentiments of the Digest. That weekly may be congratulated upon its ability to conduct free advertising campaigns, now become annual through the cosmopolitan press. Other comment is superfluous. Suffice it to say that before 1932 closes we sighted ones shall have marked our names. They will not go up in smoke. EVANSTONIAN.

FILIPINOS WARM UP TO ROOSEVELT AND HIS ENERGY

New Governor General
Makes a Hit.

BY A. H. ESCODA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
MANILA, March 25.—Whatever might be the outcome of the administration of Gov. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt, he will not lack support and encouragement from the Filipino people—at least during his first few months in Manila. This wholehearted support on the part of the people was assured on his inauguration day, after the new governor general had delivered his inaugural address on the historic Luneta before a crowd of 10,000 persons. His popularity has since continued to grow.

Despite rumblings of noncooperation, caused by a peculiar turn of developments in Washington when Mr. Roosevelt was on his way to Manila, all threats of coldness and indifference toward the new chief executive vanished almost as soon as he set foot on Philippine soil and he had spoken to a few government officials.

The prestige of a great name, a winning personality, radiating energy and good will and tact, have combined to win the hearts of the people for the new governor general. Those who met him during his first few days in Manila and who knew his father commented that the new governor was "a chip off the old block."

Mr. Roosevelt's inaugural address helped to win him friends among the common people and those sympathetic with their cause. Refusing to go into details of government or policy because he had not studied conditions in the islands, Gov. Roosevelt indicated the broad lines along which the administration would be run.

He stressed the importance of keeping the people healthy and contented; of developing agriculture up to a higher level of efficiency; of cutting expenditures down to the lowest level compatible with efficiency, and of seeing that the common "tax" received justice from the government and elsewhere.

His sponsorship of the cause of the common people received more comment than anything else he said. Few of his predecessors in office had stressed that point, and it struck a most responsive chord even among high insular government officials, according to island observers.

No Immediate Change.
Mr. Roosevelt, his island friends now say, showed that he entered upon his duties with a most sober sense of responsibility, determined not to disturb the general run of things in the government any more than was absolutely necessary. It is believed he will make changes in the long run, but on the day of his inauguration he demonstrated that he was not taking any steps in the dark when he announced that he contemplated "no radical changes in the immediate future."

This announcement was accompanied by another to the effect that he was going to ask all the members of the old cabinet to "carry on."

SELFIDGE PAYS $25,000 TO RESTORE PARISH BELLS

LONDON, March 25.—Gordon Selfridge, London department store owner and former Chicagoan, was revealed today as the anonymous American who has offered to pay for the restoration of the famous Bow Bells. The bells, which according to ancient legend called Dick Whittington to become Lord Mayor, now have been silent many years. Their preservation would have been impossible if it was not for Mr. Selfridge's gift which is understood to be in the neighborhood of $25,000.

St. Mary Le Bow church authorities are still seeking $30,000 more for urgent repairs to the steeple, roof, walls and organ of what they describe as the "most famous parish in England."

AUSTRALIA HAILS MAN WHO HURT PRIDE OF PREMIER

Films Showing New Guard
Opening Bridge Banned

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
SYDNEY, Australia, March 25.—Premier John T. Lang, head of the ultra-radical Labor government of New South Wales, today prohibited the exhibition of motion pictures showing the opening of the new $29,000,000 Sydney harbor bridge last Saturday.

The premier was deprived of the honor of opening the gigantic span at a celebration attended by many thousands of people when Capt. de Groot, a former officer of the British army, and a leader in the New Guards, galloped up to the bridge and slashed the ribbon before the eyes of the premier.

"I open this bridge in the name of common decency," he cried, amid the cheers of the throng.

Declared as Hero.
Capt. de Groot was arrested, subjected to a mental examination, and then was released on bail. The public and press have been acclaiming Capt. de Groot as a hero ever since the incident, one in which the New Guards lived up to their threat that Premier Lang "will never open the bridge."

The New Guard citizen forces, which number 100,000 in New South Wales, are combating communism in general and Premier Lang in particular. The New Guard was organized one year ago by Col. Eric Campbell, a former Australian artillery officer assisted by veteran army and navy officers and prominent industrialists at a time when the Lang government started the socialization of industry by taking control of all transportation systems and threatening other radical and socialistic reforms.

The failure of New South Wales to follow the premier's proposals to balance the budgets of all Australian states, coupled with its repudiation of its overseas debts, stimulated membership in the New Guard, which stands for "same government, suppression of communism, abolition of machine politics, and unswerving loyalty to England."

Members in Three Classes.
Its membership is divided into three classifications, namely:
Division A, comprising the fighting forces.
Division B, technical and industrial workers to handle the necessary public utilities.
Division C, for police duties.

Col. Campbell today stated that the New Guard is a nonpolitical organization, comprising men of all classes, irrespective of creed, social, or financial standing. Its first public demonstration occurred during the federal elections last December, when the New Guard broke up communist meetings in behalf of Lang candidates.

On Jan. 11 Col. Campbell was arrested for insulting Premier Lang by calling him a tyrant. He was fined and won an appeal.

On March 12 the New Guard presented a petition with half a million signatures to the royal governor, Sir Philip Game of New South Wales, requesting that King George dissolve the New South Wales parliament.

I KILLED, 3 HURT IN AUTO CRASH ON BOULEVARD

Herbert Dunleavy, 30 years old, of Miami, Fla., a salesman, was killed and two other men and a woman were injured when their automobile, northbound in Michigan avenue, was struck and overturned at Chicago avenue by a westbound car, which failed to stop at the boulevard.
The three injured are William Turk, 34, a jewelry jobber, and his wife, Irene, 30, of 2229 Sheridan road, and Samuel Frank, 201 East Delaware place. They were taken to Passavant hospital. The injuries of Mr. and Mrs. Turk and Frank were not serious. Dunleavy, who had been staying at 3318 Sheridan road while in Chicago, was found dead. Police arrested Anthony Giordano, 21, of 6805 South

Wood street, driver of the westbound car. The signal lights were out at the time of the crash.
The death of Dunleavy raised the 1932 automobile death toll in Cook county to 249.
Miss Minnie Herbert, 19 years old, 4658 South Paulina street, Wesley Persons, 21 years old, 6326 South Albany avenue, and Robert Cooper, 27 years old, 7015 Vernon avenue, suffered injuries yesterday morning when their sedan collided with a mail truck at Michigan boulevard and 13th street. They were taken to St. Luke's hospital. The truck driver, James Ronch, was not held.
CHILD DIES OF BURNS.
Constance Haff, 2, March 25.—[Special.]—Miss Drake, 10 months old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Drake of Imogene, seriously burned as result of fire in her home died today. Fire that destroyed the Drake and John Thomas homes is said to have been started by Gerald Drake, 4, playing with matches.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE WILL NOT BE MUZZLED

ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
Chicago Tribune Washington Correspondent

Those in power do not always relish publication of the truth.

An uninformed electorate presents weak resistance to predatory officialdom or subversive private interests which flourish in obscurity.

To muzzle and control the press there exists a continuous conspiracy to suppress news and to distort vital facts.

The Chicago Tribune will not assent to an abandonment or a denial of the rights guaranteed to American citizens. It will continue to print the news and to exercise its right of editorial criticism.

To get the truth the Tribune maintains Arthur Sears Henning at Washington. No news-gathering costs are too heavy to assure its readers of the true news of national government.

The Tribune is under obligation to no one to keep back the news or to color it to fit the smooth hypocrisy of raiders on the public pocketbook. It prints the facts as it finds them.

INDIANA MAYORS FIGHT 'FRAMEUP' BOOZE CHARGES

Federal Investigation of Indictments Demanded.

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.
(Chicago Tribune Staff Writer.)

Anderson, Ind., March 25.—[Special.]—Jesse H. (Hick) Mellett, mayor of Anderson, and George R. Dale, mayor of Muncie, a pair of fire-sporting Democrats who have long been blustering the hides of Hoosier Republican leaders with charges of corruption, have been indicted for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law.

A federal grand jury returned true bills at Indianapolis three weeks ago and partners of the two mayors, recovering from their first surprise, are now raising the charge that the indictments are a bad frameup. The echoes are resounding from Indiana to Washington and repercussions are expected in the forthcoming political campaign. Federal Judge Robert C. Ballou has set the case for trial May 11 at Indianapolis.

Dale Rushes to Washington.
Mayor Dale, who drew bombs and shotgun fire on his home in an anti-Klan crusade a few years ago, rattled off to Washington last Tuesday in his old sedan and at last reports was stalking up and down Pennsylvania avenue seeking a federal investigation of the "frameup."

The canny Jim Watson, senior senator from Indiana, took some of the heat off the situation, according to yesterday's reports, when he arranged the courtesy of an interview with Attorney General Mitchell for Mr. Dale. At least one Indianapolis newspaper has already taken up the cudgels on behalf of the Muncie mayor.

Mayor Mellett, normally even more truculent than his Muncie neighbor, has been quiescent thus far, for the reason that he knows nothing about his indictment.

Mellett suffered a paralytic stroke last fall while defending himself from a charge of waste before the state board of accounts and has since been in precarious health. His relatives have felt constrained to hide the news from him lest his choleric temper bring on another and fatal stroke. After an examination of the patient by court physicians, the federal authorities agreed to cooperate.

For the last five weeks the mayor has been in an Indianapolis hospital, with deputy marshal on guard outside the door, but last night, by permission of Judge Ballou, his daughter was permitted to bring him home in an ambulance, thus relieving his purse of the strain of the $125 weekly hospital bill. Since he was stricken the mayor has lost 100 pounds and his physician today said it was doubtful whether he would ever regain sufficient strength to go to trial.

Calls Followers to Bedside.
The mayor, however, is said to possess a remarkably tough constitution. Immediately on arriving home he summoned his followers to his bedside and began mapping a fight on local foes, who have brought suit to have him declared mentally incompetent, in order to void his appointment of a local newspaper man, Harry Baldwin, as city controller and their apparent to the mayoralty in the event of his death. The mayor was busy with his advisers today drafting a statement on the sanity suit, to be signed and released tomorrow.

Nor have the Mellett forces been idle concerning the federal indictment. The mayor comes of a family of newspaper men, his father having founded and edited the first daily in nearby Ellettsburg during the natural gas boom forty years ago, while five of his brothers, including the murdered Don Mellett of Canton, O., have held important editorial posts.

Brothers Try to Make Peace.
One brother, Lowell Mellett, editor of a Washington daily, has been in Indianapolis the last week end and has several calls on United States Attorney George Jeffrey, who procured the mayor's indictment. The attitude of the brothers is reported to be conciliatory thus far, but word has been passed that if and when the mayor himself learns of the indictment he will raise a storm which, by comparison, will make the Muncie mayor's blazes seem like zephyrs.

Friends and foes alike acknowledge the mayor's talents as a platform speaker. He has a faculty for capturing the sympathy of the crowd by the bluff ridicule he heaps upon his opponents. As an instance, when hecklers in past campaigns would charge him with drinking too freely, he would roar them down with a retort such as this: "Sure I had a few, but on the night in question you took twice as much as I did."

Dangerous With Fists.
Moreover, until his illness, he was the most formidable man in these parts with his fists. In all he has knocked down a dozen of his fellow citizens, including an editor and a prominent merchant.

The foundation of the "frameup" charges, according to the mayor's partisans, rests on the peculiarly persistent interest the federal agents have displayed toward the city of Harriet Harris, who was born in New Orleans, voted Austrian capital's most popular entertainer.

Anderson since Mellett was elected, and on the alleged flimsiness of the case the agents finally produced against him.

Drove Out Bootleggers.
Campaigning in the fall of 1929, Mellett ripped the Republican administration up the front and down the back. The campaign swung him into office with a record plurality of 3,800 votes.

In his inaugural address of Jan. 6, 1930, the new mayor gave the bootleggers and dive keepers until sundown to get out. The vice interests took the hint. Within a few months, however, they came creeping back, and in August of that year the mayor armed a dozen policemen with crowbars and led a raid which left the furnishings of a dozen dives in splinters on the streets. Again whiskey row was deserted for a while.

Federal Agents Jailed.
The federal agents made their first visit in October, 1930, a few weeks before the Madison county elections. On the Friday night of their arrival two of the agents became involved in a hot dispute with an Anderson police squad over their lack of auto license plates. Unable to produce identification cards, they were thrown in jail. Next morning they began their raids and by nightfall had rounded up a dozen flask toters and home brewers. The raiders discovered no dives.

A Saturday night arraignment of the prisoners was arranged by the agents, mainly in order to get the story in the Sunday papers, the mayor charged. Mellett charges the arrests were an attempt to make Republican political capital on the eve of an election at the expense of a few harmless citizens who were brewing beer for lack of better jobs. The mayor pursued them for several weeks and some of the cases were finally dropped.

Hands Off the Legion.
In the ensuing months federal agents popped in and out of Anderson almost weekly, according to reports at the city hall. No sensational cases were developed, the agents passing up a golden opportunity when the mayor notified the prohibition administrator that Anderson would be host to the state Legion convention the week in August, 1931, and suggested that the administrator assume full responsibility for enforcement of the Volstead act.

The Legionnaires were not molested. Mayor Mellett, at a public hearing, accused Gov. Harry G. Leslie of revealing too strenuously for his own dignity at the convention. The agents bided their time until the autumn.

Mayor Stricken at Quiz.
On Oct. 28 the mayor was summoned before the state board of accounts at Indianapolis to justify an expenditure of $11 a ton for asphalt, an expenditure which had been discovered by state inspectors checking the books at the city hall. In a towering rage the mayor was protesting that his Republican predecessors had spent $80 a ton for the same materials, when he fell under the stroke and was taken to a hospital.

Meanwhile a crew of twelve agents, led by Walter Morgan, special investigator from Washington, moved into a west side bungalow here and, according to reports, began tapping telephones all over town. About the time the mayor was stricken they raided a $25,000 still on a farm seven miles southeast of town and arrested the farmer, John Bronnenberg.

Forty-One Indicted.
For the next two months the agents were immediately active. By January the fruits of their toll became known when deputy marshals from Indianapolis descended on Madison county and served subpoenas on more than sixty persons, including policemen, bootleggers, city officials and personal friends of the mayor, to testify before the federal grand jury on Feb. 23.

On March 4 the jury returned an indictment naming 38 persons in Anderson and 13 in Muncie, the batch including both mayors. The document contained more than forty paragraphs, two of which were devoted to Mayor Mellett. One paragraph set forth that on two occasions the mayor had withdrawn a gallon of alcohol from the store of liquor confiscated by police and sent it to his friends; the second charged that he had accepted a sum of money from John Owen, alleged payoff man for the alleged liquor ring, to make a trip to Hot Springs, Ark.

"If the government is going to indict a man for giving a little liquor to a friend, they'll have every politician in Indiana in prison," a city official commented. "As for the bribery charge, Hick Mellett may have done a lot of things, but he has never taken a nickel from the liquor interests."

SONSTEBY STOPS SECRET RELEASE OF PRISONERS

'Undercover' Actions.

Chief Justice John J. Sonstebly yesterday instructed judges of the Municipal court to stop releasing prisoners from the house of correction and the county jail before their terms have been served and without payment of fines and costs. In a letter to the judges the chief justice said the "undercover" release of prisoners has brought much criticism on the court.

Under the law the judges are allowed to reopen a criminal case on affidavits charging errors of fact in the hearing at which the prisoner was sentenced. A prisoner may be released from payment of a fine or court costs on a court order based on a pauper's petition. In both instances a hearing in open court is necessary.

Sonstebly Accuses Judges.
Chief Justice Sonstebly said that the law has been abused by several judges, whom he refused to name. In many instances, he said, prisoners have been released a few days after commitment and without a hearing. In some instances prisoners have been released by other judges than those who imposed the sentence.

The order of the chief justice followed an investigation demanded by Richey V. Graham, acting superintendent of the house of correction.

tendent of the house of correction, who refused to honor court orders issued without a hearing. Chief Justice Sonstebly conferred with State's Attorney Swanson and City Prosecutor Rosina.

To curb abuse of the power to release prisoners, the chief justice ordered that all petitions for release be filed with the clerk of the Municipal court. The state's attorney, or city prosecutor then is to be given a written notice of the time and place of a hearing on the petition. The committing judge is to enter a signed order denying or allowing the petition after an open hearing.

Bar Association Notified.
Chief Justice Sonstebly also sent copies of his letter to the Chicago Bar association, the Chicago crime commission, and the state's attorney, and city prosecutor. The organizations and officials have approved his plan.

"With a check on each petition abuse of the law will be stopped," Chief Justice Sonstebly said. "The judges will cooperate in this matter to end criticism of the court. I am confident that the judges who did not hold hearings on the petitions acted in good faith, though their action was not legal."

RUNAWAY GIRL, 16,
LEAPS 3 STORIES
TO EVADE POLICE

Miss Viola Lundberg, 16 years old, leaped from the third floor window of the home of Harry Lewis at 424 East 82d street yesterday afternoon when she saw a police squad car drive up and thought that she would be returned to the juvenile home. At the county hospital last night it was reported that she had suffered a fractured leg and internal injuries, but was expected to recover.

The girl's father, Philip, and her step-mother, had charged that she was "incorrigible" and always running away from home. She was placed in the juvenile home, from which the Rev. A. L. Wilson, pastor of the Kenwood Evangelical church, took her to the home of Mrs. John Doring, 2019 Touhy avenue.

ENDS OWN LIFE 3 WEEKS AFTER DEATH OF WIFE

Shoots Self at Scene of Honeymoon.

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—Word came from Jacksonville, Fla., today that Gerald Sturgis Greenleaf, 40, committed suicide by poison in a fit of despondency over the death of his wife, Louise, 38, found dead of a bullet wound in the temple. He had been in the Greystone hotel on Broadway, March 3.

Notes left by Greenleaf at the Greystone hotel and in a fraternal lodge temple in Jacksonville, where he killed himself, said his wife had committed suicide. Detectives here said today they had not determined if Mrs. Greenleaf had been murdered or was a suicide.

In a note left at the hotel, Greenleaf wrote he was going to take his own life, said he had found his wife in bed with a towel knotted about her throat. He unbound the towel, the note said. Then, while he was in an adjoining room, he heard a revolver report. He discovered his wife unconscious, a bullet wound in the temple. He tried for hours to revive her, then realizing she was dead wrote several notes and vanished.

Greenleaf, an unemployed accountant, came here from Santa Barbara, Cal., where he was said to have been manager of the El Mirasol hotel. He had been a first sergeant in the United States marine corps.

SUES TO FORCE DRY PRISONERS INTO ROAD GANG

Charleston, W. Va., March 25.—[Special.]—State Prohibition Commissioner W. G. Brown today filed a suit to compel Sheriff C. A. Conley of Fayette county to detain prohibition prisoners as "long as possible." Brown said the suit requested a mandamus of Judge J. W. Geary of Fayette circuit court to compel Conley to "work the prohibition prisoners on the road." Conley, Brown said, had objected to working them on the ground that it required extra prison guards and the county could not afford that expense. Attorney General Howard Lee has held that a misdemeanor violator can only be held 10 days in jail "if opportunity to work on the roads has been denied him."

That dinner party

BILL and JEANNE gave a big dinner dance to celebrate their fifth anniversary. We got to the after-dinner coffee at ten-thirty. Ordinarily I don't drink coffee at night because it keeps me awake. But this was an occasion—and I broke the rule, expecting to pay for it by tossing in bed. When I didn't, I was curious, until Jeanne told me the next day that it was "the coffee that lets you sleep." That's how I learned that coffee can be good and good for you too.

Kellogg's Kaffee Hag Coffee is a wonderful coffee to serve at evening parties. All your guests can enjoy it without risking a sleepless night.

It is not a substitute—it is nothing but the purest, finest coffee with 97% of the caffeine and the indigestible wax removed. Drink as much as you want—it won't keep you awake or affect your nerves or digestion. The new blend has a flavor that almost always brings you compliments on your fine coffee. Reduced in price.

Roasted by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold at your grocer's in vacuum-sealed tins. Quality guaranteed. Money refunded if you aren't entirely satisfied.

TROUBLE FEARED AS IRISH PREPARE REPUBLICAN FETE

Dublin Plans Big Parade on Easter Day.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, March 25.—(AP)—Little imitation Easter lilies made of munition, which were sold all over Dublin today and worn in hundreds of buttonholes, may bring trouble to Ireland before this weekend is over.

The flower has been chosen as the emblem of Irish republicanism, for it recalls the Easter uprising of 1916. The buttonholes bear the white, green, and orange colors of the republican flag. As a precaution against a repetition of the 1916 trouble, troops of the Irish Free State army will be confined to barracks on Easter day.

The Irish republican army and the Cumann na Mban, an organization of women republicans, organized the lily sale and plastered the town with posters reproducing the proclamation of the republic of 1916.

Call on People to Unite.

The posters called on the Irish people to unite in "one supreme effort to break the connection with the British empire and establish a free, sovereign Irish republic."

The republican army and kindred bodies, which were banned under the late Cosgrave government, have made elaborate preparations for the Sunday celebrations here and in other towns of the Free State.

In Dublin the schedule includes a special mass at the Carmelite church and afterward a parade from St. Stephen's green to Glasnevin cemetery, where there will be speeches over the graves in the republican plot.

Mrs. Gonne McBride, sometimes called the "Irish Joan of Arc," will head the demonstration in County Cavan and Mary McSwiney, widow of the mayor of Cork, who died on a hunger strike, will lead it in the city of Cork.

Uster Guards Against Trouble.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] BELFAST, Northern Ireland, March 25.—Fearing trouble from the Irish republican army on Easter Sunday, the Uster government is taking precautionary measures. All border stations have been strengthened. Five republican meetings planned for Easter Sunday in Belfast and in the provinces were officially banned by the home minister tonight and vigorous steps are being taken to prevent the holding of gatherings to commemorate the Easter week revolt of 1916.

Reply to British Delay.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] DUBLIN, March 25.—It is now believed that the free state government will not reply before Tuesday, or even later, to the recent letter from J. H. Thomas, British secretary of dominions, regarding President de Valera's announced intention of abolishing the oath of allegiance to the king.

The attitude of the labor party is doubtful on this question. W. J. O'Brien, labor leader, emphatically declined today to give any assurance, declaring that a statement now would not help the crisis. He said he would indicate the party's policy when questions of the oath and the king's position de Valera also proposes to withhold from Britain, arose in the fall.

DRUGGIST PICKS 2 CUSTOMERS AS FORMER ROBBERS

When George Chuck, 25 years old, and John Gavrilis, 30, both of 555 Barry avenue, sat down to sodas in Liggett's drug store at 601 Davis street, Evanston, last night Cyrus L. Sickman, the manager, thought he recognized them. He called police. The men were arrested and a revolver was found on Gavrilis. At the station Sickman asserted that Gavrilis and Chuck were the same men who had been in the pharmacy Oct. 18 last and escaped with $1,000. They denied the charge.

Chicago and Evanston police later went to 557 Barry avenue, where they arrested Mrs. Helen Canfield, 31, and took her to Evanston for questioning.

LEVINE'S $10,000 FELONY BAIL BOND ORDERED CALLED

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—Magistrate August Dreyer in the Southern court today ordered forfeited a $10,000 bail bond on which Charles A. Levine, trans-Atlantic flyer, is at liberty.

Levine is under indictment for forgery and grand larceny in the first degree.

Magistrate Dreyer stayed execution of the order until March 28 at the instance of Levine's attorney, who submitted an affidavit stating that Levine was confined to his bed with a broken leg sustained in an airplane crash. Levine is accused of using stolen shares as part collateral in the negotiation of a loan.

Burglar Alarm Traps Pair of Store Looters

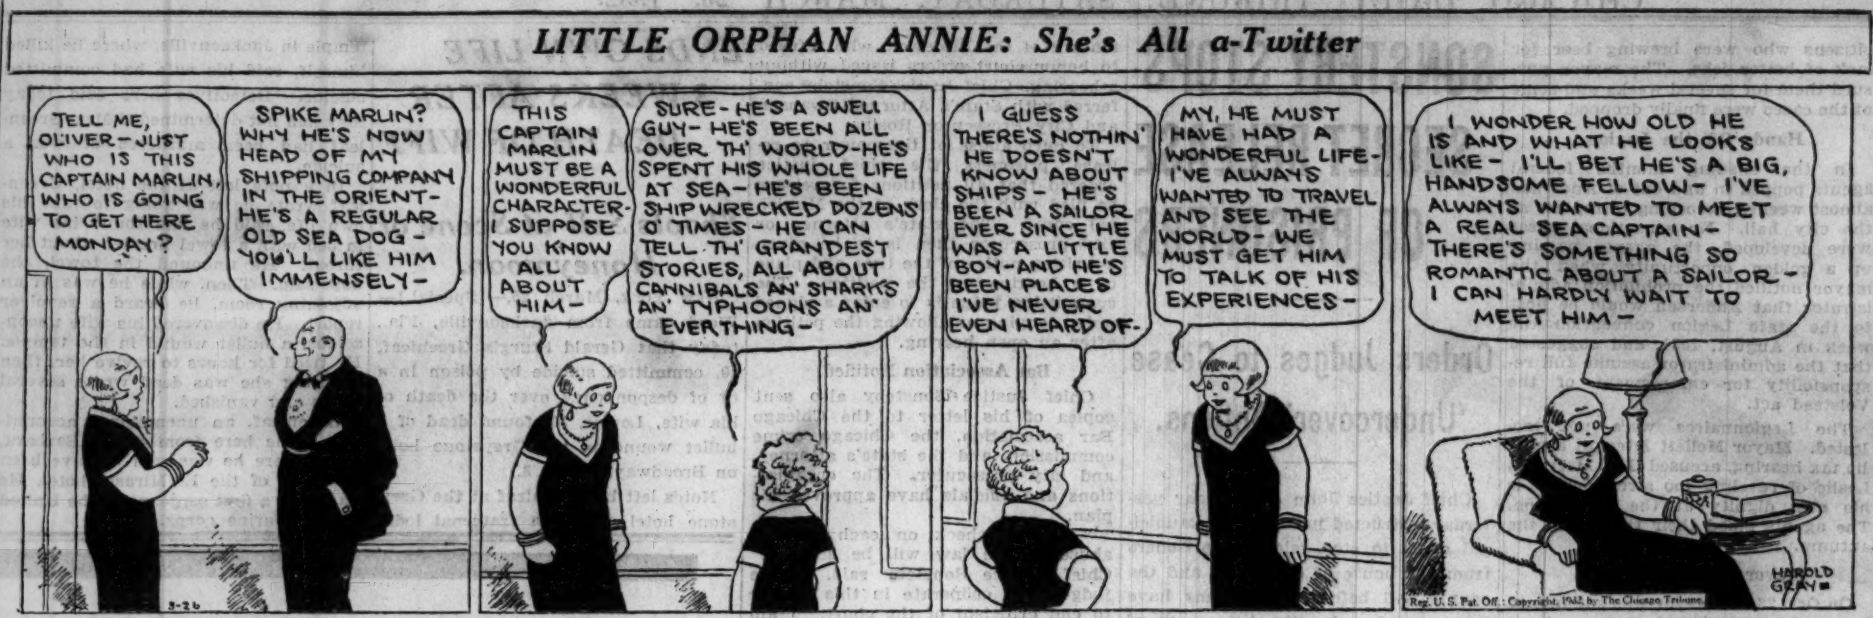

An A. D. T. detective agency squad arrested two alleged burglars last night at the store of the Coliseum Battery and Equipment company, 1616 Wabash avenue. The prisoners were John Egeuske, 25 years old, of 4220 South Fairfield avenue, recently paroled from Pontiac, and Charles Krause, 25, of 46 West Austin avenue. One of the men was caught in the place and the other on the fire escape. The agency squad, composed of Louis Elias, Frank Eshorn, and Lynn Hildebrandt, were summoned by a burglar alarm.

ONE-FIFTH OF ALL BRITISH INCOME TAX PAID BY RICH

Number in Big Money Class Growing.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 25.—Whatever else is happening in Great Britain, millionaires are becoming more numerous. Twenty-one more persons paid tax and surtax on incomes in excess of £50,000 ($250,000 on the gold basis) during 1930-31 than in the previous year, according to the report of the internal revenue commissioners of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. This brought the total in this class to 540.

These received incomes to a 5 per cent return on £1,000,000, which was nearly $5,000,000 with the pound at par. Thus, a man with an income of £10,000 ($50,000) annually ranked with a donor millionaire until the pound went off gold last September. Since sterling was redeemable in gold during the fiscal year treated in the report, all persons making £10,000 or more a year are in the millionaires class.

103,927 Paid Surtax.

The entire surtax classification caught 103,927 Britons inside the select ring during the last revenue year, had previously paid a total of nearly £57,000,000 ($285,000,000).

That figure throws a bright light on the extreme rigor with which the wealthy taxpayers in the provinces paid their payments into the national treasury were equal to one-fifth of the total revenue received from income tax.

The money proportion of one to five compares with a numerical ratio of about one to twenty-two, for the figure of 100,000 odd surtax payers goes on to a total of 2,000,000 income taxpayers.

Income Taxpayers Decrease.

The number of income taxpayers decreased by 50,000 from the year 1929-30, when the total was 2,250,000. They paid more money into the treasury, however, than the larger number had previously. Collections during 1930-31 amounted to £255,399,304 ($1,276,996,220), or nearly £18,000,000 ($90,000,000) above the payments of the year before.

Thus, after deductions, chief of which was the personal claim of £155 ($675) in the case of single persons, and £225 ($1,125) for a married man, there was an assessment of 2 shillings 10 pence (10 cents) in the pound, or approximately $1,250. Thereafter the standard 25.5 per cent rate applied.

How Surtax Is Charged.

Surtax was charged on incomes of £2,000 ($10,000) and above. The rate climbed to 5 shillings 6 pence (28 cents) for the first £250, or approximately 10 per cent for incomes of £150,000 ($750,000). Combined taxation, both income and surtax, amounted to $428,190. For married persons with three children drawing this income the tax was only $280 less.

Altogether there were 4,500 persons in the country whose incomes made them liable to payment of tax. 200,000 fewer than the previous year, when the same rate applied. Taxation on earned incomes began at £170 ($850) annually.

A. W. Chase, Ex-Teacher, to Be Buried in East

The body of Arthur W. Chase, for 38 years instructor of mechanical drawing at Crane Technical High school, who died on Thursday in the West Suburban hospital, is to be sent to Manchester, N. H., it was announced by Anthony J. Callendo, a former pupil, who is making the arrangements for the burial. Mr. Chase was 73 years old and a bachelor. He retired from the public school service in 1928. He was the author of the first textbook on mechanical drawing used in the public high schools.

James A. Hagan, Veteran Contractor, Is Dead at 64

James A. Hagan, 64 years old, a contractor for 45 years, died yesterday at Mercy hospital. Mr. Hagan was secretary and treasurer of the Indian Hill Stone company. He lived at 4514 Ellis avenue. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at St. Ambrose church, 47th street and Ellis avenue. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre, Mr. Hagan was born in Chicago and lived here all his life. He is survived by his widow and four children.

Hoover Sends Message to Widow of U. S. Custodian

President Hoover yesterday sent a telegram to Mrs. Ida Nagl, expressing sympathy at the death of her husband, Charles Nagl, veteran custodian of the federal building, who died Thursday evening of heart disease. Funeral services for Mr. Nagl will be held at 2 o'clock today in the chapel at Madison street and Western avenue. Burial in Forest Home cemetery will be in charge of the Masonic order.

AGNEW T. DICE, 69, READING PRESIDENT, DROPS DEAD IN EAST

Philadelphia, Pa., March 25.—(AP)—Agnew T. Dice, 69, president of the Reading company, dropped dead tonight while going home with his wife. Death apparently was due to heart failure.

Agnew Thompson Dice was born in Scotland, Pa., Nov. 2, 1862. He was compelled to go to work at an early age, and, selecting railroad as his career, he finally achieved the position of president of the Philadelphia and Reading railway company.

His first job was with the Pennsylvania railroad as a flagman with the engineering corps. Later he was made superintendent of all the lines of the Philadelphia and Reading company, and in 1913 was elected vice president and general manager.

When Theodore Voorhees, president of the Reading, died, the directors chose Dice to succeed him. Mr. Dice made his home in Reading for a number of years.

Some of the problems to be considered immediately by the organization were mentioned yesterday by its newly appointed chairman, C. B. Denman, of the federal farm board. The conferees reported that an attack would be made on the wide disparity existing between prices of retail meats and the prices paid live stock growers. A "well directed" advertising and educational program for the industry is to be urged.

Other Problems to Be Met.

From 1900 to 1914 Americans consumed on the average 143.7 pounds of meat annually per capita," declared Denman. "That is 10 1/2 pounds more than we consumed last year, and means that if we were to return to the pre-war consumption basis, over 1 1/2 billion pounds of meat would be needed above last year's production. This would in turn call for increased feeds and pastures, thus adding directly in solving problems of surplus in grains and other farm crops."

Prices to Be Adjusted.

The first step contemplated by the council of 100, it was said, will be to adjust prices paid farmers so that they will be rewarded for producing the light weight, fine quality meats demanded by consumers. Another objective will be to reduce such expenses as commissions on sales and transportation costs and to eliminate wastes in processing and retailing.

FUNERAL TO BE HELD ON MONDAY FOR MRS. CREEDON

Funeral services for Mrs. Clara Wright Creedon, for 50 years a teacher in Chicago schools, will be held at 9:30 o'clock Monday in St. Lucy's Roman Catholic church, Lake street and Mayfield avenue.

Mrs. Creedon, who was 70 years old, died on Thursday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Emily Wright Thorndike, 308 North Wacker avenue. She was born in Sibleyburg, Wis., and was the widow of Stephen D. Creedon, pioneer Chicago boot and shoe wholesaler.

Mrs. Creedon was assistant principal of the McLauren school for some years, and thereafter principal of the Haven and McCormick schools. She retired two years ago.

Her sister and two brothers, Alfred L. Wright and William E. Wright, survive.

REV. W. A. BURCH, FORMER CHICAGO PASTOR, IS DEAD

The Rev. William A. Burch, formerly of Evanston and Chicago, died yesterday in Pasadena, Cal., after a brief illness, according to a message received by friends here.

He was 68 years old. About ten years ago Mr. Burch retired as pastor of the South Park Methodist church and went to California. He was at one time financial secretary of Northwestern university and also a trustee of the North Shore music festival.

Surviving the Rev. Mr. Burch are his widow and a son, who is a minister in the Methodist church. He was placed on trial in Los Angeles in 1921, charged with the murder of J. Belton Kennedy. Also indicted for the Kennedy killing was Madeline Owschinski. Both were acquitted.

E. J. W. DIETZ, PUBLISHER, TO BE BURIED MONDAY

Funeral services for E. J. W. Dietz, publisher of the American Pigeon Keeper, will be held at 10 o'clock Monday at the chapel at 313 North Central avenue, with burial in Graceland cemetery. Mr. Dietz, who was 64 years old, died on Thursday in his home at 1051 North Thatcher avenue, River Forest. He had been in ill health for some months.

Mr. Dietz was the author of several books on pigeons and poultry. He was a former president of the Chicago advertising club and of the Chicago poultry show, and frequently acted as a judge at poultry shows throughout the country.

A daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Bowman of River Forest, survives.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

Dr. George Carl Fisher, 7558 Kingsford avenue, is not a member of the faculty of the Northwestern University Medical school. It was incorrectly stated in the Tribune of Thursday morning that the physician was an assistant professor and head of a branch of the medical clinic. Dr. Fisher resigned from his post in 1923.

OPEN CAMPAIGN TO MAKE WORLD MEAT CONSCIOUS

Organization Formed to Boom Market.

BY PAUL POTTER.
An organized movement to regain for American live stock farmers and packers the lost foreign meat trade and to modernize domestic production and distribution so that meat can be restored to its former popularity in this country was launched in Chicago yesterday.

Leaders from the packing, producing, transporting, and retailing divisions of the live stock and meat industry met with federal and state university meat experts at the Morrison hotel and set the movement going. The conference of 75 men from scattered parts of the nation voted to create a council of 100 for the business building effort.

Other Problems to Be Met.

From 1900 to 1914 Americans consumed on the average 143.7 pounds of meat annually per capita," declared Denman. "That is 10 1/2 pounds more than we consumed last year, and means that if we were to return to the pre-war consumption basis, over 1 1/2 billion pounds of meat would be needed above last year's production. J. E. Reardon, Head of Tea Firm, to Be Buried Today

Funeral services for John E. Reardon, president of the J. E. Reardon Tea and Coffee company, will be held at 10 a. m. today in St. Catherine's Roman Catholic church, Austin and Washington boulevards. Burial will be in Mount Carmel cemetery. Mr. Reardon, who was 52 years old, died of pneumonia on Thursday at his home, 115 North Central avenue. His widow and seven children survive.

FRANK PAWLOWSKI, for many years a real estate dealer in the Cragin district, will be buried on Monday after funeral services at 10 a. m. in St. Stanislaus Roman Catholic church, 115 North Central avenue. He was 60 years old, died on Tuesday at Stevens Point, Wis. He had made his home here for the last two years, having retired from business in 1925.

HUSBAND OF WIFE SLAIN IN SUICIDE PACT FOUND SANE

John H. Rork, Chicago salesman, who was found not guilty of the murder of his former wife, Frances, in a suicide pact, on the plea that he was insane, yesterday was found sane in a hearing before Judge Grant Crumpacker in Valparaiso. The slaying occurred on Nov. 1, 1930, in a car on the Dunes highway near Miller, Ind.

The body of Mrs. Rork was found in her automobile with her husband, who was seriously wounded. Rork recovered after a long stay in the hospital. He said that he and his former wife had decided on suicide to end domestic troubles. Mrs. Rork shot herself first, then he took the gun, Rork said.

The first jury that heard the case disagreed. At the second trial a jury returned the not guilty verdict on March 19 as a result of the insanity plea. An Indiana statute provides that if two persons try to take their lives and one is killed, the other shall be charged with murder.

PROBATE WILL GIVING $100,000 TO BIRTH CONTROL

Los Angeles, Calif., March 25.—(AP)—The will of Miss Viola Kaufman, which left her $100,000 to be used by her attorney, Henry Chamberlain, at about $100,000 to the interests of birth control, was probated here today. Miss Kaufman died in Memphis, Tenn., several weeks ago.

The estate consisted of real estate, stocks, and bonds. She willed it to the national committee on federal legislation for birth control, or if that organization was not qualified to accept it, she directed that it be given to the birth control clinical research bureau. Both organizations are located in New York.

In the event neither organization could accept the estate, she willed it to Margaret Sanger, a leader in the organizations.

OAK PARK BOY WINS IN STATE SCHOOL CONTEST

Springfield, Ill., March 25.—(AP)—Agnes Anthony, 12, Beaverlue, won first in the state declamation contest for grade school pupils sponsored by the George Washington bicentennial commission and Illinois state educational committee tonight at Centennial building.

Robert R. Whitaker school, Oak Park, and Chas. E. Eddleman, Pinckneyville, both 13 years old, tied for second place, but Francis G. Blair, state superintendent of public instruction, who presided, ruled second place would go to the Oak Park boy since two of the judges placed him first.

Six other pupils competed in the contest: Raymond Adams, Illinois; Jane Guker, Woodriver; Evelyn Loy, Hinkley; Eunice Kopecky, Marion, Buena Vista; and Jack Porteney, all of Chicago.

First prize consisted of a silver medal and the privilege of representing Illinois in the national contest this summer in Washington, D. C. Second prize was a bronze medal and third prize a diploma. Subject material was taken from the life of Washington.

Lieutenant..... Jerry Miley

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

"Sky Devils" is a heap of fun! It's a sort of farcical air-minded takeoff on "What Price Glory" and "Hell's Angels," combining much rough and tumble humor with some of the most breath taking flying that you ever saw. That the latter is clown aviation detracts not at all from the suspense attendant on it, and whoever held the stick of the riotous plane that swoops and hops and shimmies and reels, close to earth, chasing folks and animals, grazing barn roofs, just missing tree tops and causing strong men to fall down on the turnpikes and play snake, took his life in his hands just as surely as did any of the experts who perilously rode the heavens in "Hell's Angels."

The comedy and dialogue are rich and racy, without, excepting in possibly one or two instances, ever becoming vulgar. Spencer Tracy—how I am learning to love that man!—gives one of his sure fire performances, ably assisted by George Cooper, who plays David to his Jonathan. The twin are first discovered as nonswimming life guards at an American seaside resort. Chance brings to their acquaintance a belligerent prize fighter (William Boyd) whose heroic thunder (he saves a man from drowning) they callously steal.

Like an elephant (or a parrot—ever have one?) Hogan doesn't forget, as they are later to discover when they have him as their sergeant in the flying corps where Fate casts them willy-nilly.

It is also Fate which causes Hogan and Wilde (Mr. Tracy) to fall for the same canteen entertainer, whose papa—but never mind about her papa—

Mr. Boyd is splendid as the frascable sergeant, and Billy Bevan, graduated from the Mack Sennett classics, does his reputation proud as a little pouter pigeon of a flying corps colonel who takes the war very seriously and is always bumping into circumstances over which he has no control. Ann Dvorak et al. qualify excellently.

The whole fool picture is gloriously ridiculous and has been directed to the nines by Eddie Sutherland, who, it is plain to be seen, knows a joke when he sees one.

"Sky Devils" was produced by Howard Hughes, who made the fabulously expensive ($3,000,000) "Hell's Angels," and they do say it was screened because Mr. Hughes decided to use leftover shots from the former venture.

Whatever was the dear man's inspiration, results prove it a prod of genius, for "Sky Devils" is one of those comedies that you DO write home about.

"CHEATERS AT PLAY."
Produced by Fox.
Directed by Hamilton MacFadden.
Presented at the Palace theater.

THE CAST.
Michael Lanyard..... Thomas Melghan
Mrs. Crozier..... Charlotte Greenwood
Maurice Perry..... William Bakewell
Freda Leitch..... Ralph Morgan
Fenne Crozier..... Barbara Weeks
Tess Boyce..... Linda Watkins
Wally..... William Pawley
Secretary..... John H. Wood
Detective Crane..... James Kirkwood
Captain..... Anders Van Haden
Strong Arm Algy..... Dewey Robinson

Thomas Melghan's skillful and sincere performance makes "Cheaters at Play" a pleasure. His work is so sure that it rests you. Here is a man who WILL speak and act naturally under all conditions. He will not lose his head; he will not be put to naught by peculiarities of either script or direction. In other words, you can depend upon Mr. Melghan—and people you can depend on ARE such a comfort.

Besides this player there are other reasons for seeing "Cheaters at Play." Charlotte Greenwood, for instance. Most of us would pay our money out any time to watch the amazing gyrations of this long, lank lady with the windmill arms and legs and the large, scurrying grin. Like Mr. Melghan, Miss Greenwood can work wonders with a strip here and a scrap there. BUT—the two of 'em have more than strips and scraps in this number. They have an interesting crook story, wherein the old adage, "Set a thief to catch a thief," comes true.

Most of the action occurs on an ocean liner. The boat, en route to America from Europe, carries, among others—

A Mrs. Crozier, formerly of burlesque but now of the social register, who has in her possession the immensely valuable Hapsburg emeralds which she has just bought—

Her pretty niece, Fenne (sounds like a pill)—

Correct for General Wear

Rose beige in color, trimmed with a lynx fur collar, this spring coat is very correct for daytime and general wear. Mary Carlyle wears it with a wide stiff belt that gives the high waistline effect.

Sleek Patent Leather Things Brighten Styles

Accessories Glisten in All Shops.

By Rhea Seeger.

THE sleekest, slickest, most shining new spring things in town are the costume accessories that have teamed up with black patent leather to glisten and gleam in every shop. Patent leather used to occupy rather a doubtful position; if not doubtful it was much lower in fashion scheme of the things than it is now. . . . good juvenile authority insists that patent leather shoes were and are popular for no other reason than the shoe shining problem could be solved quickly and casually with a mere wipe or two. But now shoes of this smart shining stuff are welcomed into the swankiest and most sophisticated society of filmy French hose, the smartest dancing and theater-going feet are shod in patent leather.

Starting from scratch . . . patent leather climbed the first and much advertised new rungs of the fashion ladder and reached the weak and undernourished vital spot of the modern costume—the handbags that wrapped themselves in brilliant coverings of patent, probably a sort of shining armor as protection for the yawning, empty cavities that lurked within.

From that height it was just another whirl, and patent leather belts added much luster to waistlines.

To New Gloves.

Then as a reward for good and finished control over former impulses to roam about this fashion climber was reinstated and was well handled by the newest gloves that use this glistening smart stuff for trimming . . . yes, indeed, trimming . . . black patent leather has swept its way around the cuffs and covered the buttons on the smartest white kid gloves and has achieved a brilliant contrast.

Climbs Again
To Flowers.

Having given this fashionable black beauty a good hand the upward climb was resumed. In this depressing era of makeshifts the ingenious designers decided that flowers for either lapel or hat were very important. Flowers, however, though common garden variety stocks went into spiral spins and flattened out into complete oblivion, so, having used practically everything in the way of materials, the designer started flower lovers and distinguished botanists with buds and blossoms of patent leather . . . and, while we wear them and sometimes scratch our chin on them, they certainly do brighten up the world and what else could any one demand, especially when you can save all their shining smartness when you save their surface each day with a swish of a dust brush.

Patent leather has climbed into fashion and now sees the world from every hat angle . . . the band on your smartest sailor hat is patent leather . . . the flowers that are tucked beneath the brim of your cherished French original are undoubtedly patent leather . . . the bows on your pet sports rock are of this smart and stylish finished fashion success. Without it your smartest ensemble is a dull and drooping affair . . . with your simplest dress shines with your simplest dress shines with almost dazzling chic.

Rush Preparations for Garden Show; Many Clubs Enter

In a space of more than 150,000 square feet at the Navy Pier workmen and gardeners are busy preparing for the annual flower show of the Garden Club of Illinois in which scores of garden clubs of the Chicago area, as well as a large number of commercial interests, are putting up exhibits. The show will run from April 2 to 9, Show Manager John A. Severs is using a bicycle to supervise activities. To serve as portals of entry to the garden club section of the show the Lincoln park system is working on a large garden display, to be balanced on the other end of the amateur entries by a tropical garden and water-fall being set up by the west park commission.

Black Horse Troop Will Take Part in Ball Pageant

Chicago's Black Horse troop will take part in the pageant at the George Washington ball to be held in the Stevens hotel on April 30, according to an announcement made yesterday by Col. T. A. Siqueland. The troop and band, 110 men, will appear in uniform under command of Col. Walter Fisher.

Combination Frocks for Day and Evening Rage of Paris

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—(Special.)—Two-time dresses and ensembles are the pet theme of Paris fashions, and the talents of some of the greatest French designers are kept busy turning out frocks which can be worn for both afternoon and evening. The outstanding difference between the day and evening frocks is, of course, sleeves, and the axis of the two-time dress is the sleeves. Some way has to be contrived whereby these necessary details of the day-time dress can be whisked off for evening.

The latest contrivance for adding and removing sleeves is from Bernard et Cie, and it consists of adding an underbust to a low-cut evening frock. I have had this dress sketched for you, because it contains a good idea for turning an evening frock into something suitable for formal afternoon.

The evening dress proper is made of black mat crepe with a bodice having a cowl drape in front. The skirt is made of a twisted rope of the crepe. The ankle-length skirt is closely fitted about the hips, and five bias bands descend from the left side, beginning at the waistline, to the center front, where they are flared into gores that give fullness to the lower skirt.

The underbust is entirely separate from the dress, and has a deep yoke and upper sleeves of white or crocheted lace. The lower sleeve is made of black crepe to match the dress and is hitched up to the elbows, though it's made full length.

Shoppers Launch the Final Rush of Easter Buying

Crowds thronged the loop and neighborhood shopping centers yesterday as thousands took advantage of the fair weather and did their shopping for Easter. Many a mother was seen leading her child by the hand and carrying bulky packages that looked strangely like Easter bunnies or a new spring bonnet.

Florists were busy all over the city filling orders for Easter lilies, roses, and corsages of gardenias, lilies of the valley, and orchids. Their windows bloomed with lilies, traditionally the favorite Easter flower.

Real live Easter rabbits and live baby chicks were being snapped up to have all ready to surprise the youngsters on Easter morning. Candy eggs in brilliant colors, as well as hand decorated hen's eggs, were being assembled for the annual Easter egg hunt tomorrow morning.

Many of the shoppers were buying Easter gifts of boxes of candy, handkerchiefs, hose, and such, while the more serious shoppers were the frankly trying on new straw hats and new Easter frocks, and hoping they'd have time to get the necessary accessories for the spring outfit.

Fairbanks Aids Crew as Yacht Battles Storm

Los Angeles, Cal., March 25.—(P)—The yacht Invader, carrying Douglas Fairbanks, motion picture star, and his company to location in the South sea, was reported today to have narrowly escaped foundering on uncharted coral reefs in Tahiti. Radio reports to the United Artists studio here said the vessel was caught in a storm, and Fairbanks and other passengers joined the crew's fight to keep the Invader off the rocks.

Betty Knobe Sets June 8 for Wedding

Ceremony May Be Held in Garden.

BY JUDITH CASS.

MISS BETTY KNOBE has decided to be a June bride, but whether she will become the bride of Horton Conrad in the beautiful garden of her parents' residence in Hubbard Woods, where she made her debut in the early autumn of 1929, or in picturesque little Christ church in Winnetka is still to be decided.

If only our weather were more dependable I have a feeling that a garden wedding it would be but since it might be cold on June 18 it may be that Miss Knobe will play safe and plan to have her wedding bells peal out at Christ church.

She is hoping, of course, that her dearest friend, Mrs. John Dorn 11, (Jean MacLellan), will be able to be matron of honor—an interesting event in the Dorn household about the middle of May might prevent Mrs. Dorn from attending her chum—and Nancy Knobe, the superb sister of the bride-to-be, will be the maid of honor.

Mr. Conrad's best man will be one of his classmates at Dartmouth, where he was graduated in 1925. The other members of the bridal party have not been selected yet. Miss Knobe is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Morton Knobe and Mr. Conrad is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Edgar Conrad of La Grange. Miss Knobe was graduated from Westover, where Nancy is "being finished" now, and from Wellesley in 1931.

Phyllis Radford Wedding Today.

A wedding in Christ church, Winnetka, this afternoon will be that of Miss Phyllis Radford, daughter of Mrs. Hughes Radford of the Ambassador East hotel, to George T. Furness, son of Mr. and Mrs. George James Furness of Roundwood house, Wilsden, England, which will take place at 4:30 o'clock, with the Rev. Ashley Gerhard officiating. The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the Winnetka residence of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Donald Dallas.

The bride's sister, Miss Molly Radford, will be her maid of honor, and her cousin, Miss Harriet Louise Dallas, will act as bridesmaid. Leonard Wright of Beckenham, Kent, England, will be best man for the bridegroom, and the ushers will be Hughes Dallas, Hyde Gillette, Randolph Payson, and Harry Kerr of Detroit.

Because Mr. Furness has never traveled in this country, he and his bride are to spend the first two weeks of their honeymoon in the Carolinas and other southeastern states. They will sail on April 29 for England. Their future address will be Stanmore Hall, Middlesex. Stanmore Hall, we understand, is a picturesque old castle which has been added to the mansions of Miss Radford and her husband-to-be are quite delighted with the "flat" they have leased.

Miss Rose Lauder Is Engaged.

An interesting engagement that has just come to light is that of Miss Rose Lauder of Lake Forest and Diarmuid Russell, also of Lake Forest, who is the son of the famous Irish poet who writes under the initials "A. B." They "A. B." will be married early in June at the residence of Miss Lauder's brother-in-law and sister, Mrs. Harold Ambler, in Lake Forest, and I'm told they are going to live the cunningest apartment imaginable over the garage on Mrs. Charles S. Holt's estate on Green Bay road.

An interesting engagement that is being announced is that of Mrs. Frances Connelly Dawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stuart Connelly of 1139 Lake Shore drive, to Thomas Ingle Underwood of Chicago, son of Mrs. Frederick W. Petersen of Ann Arbor, Mich. The wedding will take place fairly soon.

The winners at the keno party to be given this afternoon by the Edward H. Bennett at their Lake Forest residence, "Bassett," will be asked to contribute their winnings to the Ridge Farm Preventorium and a box will be on hand in which to deposit the money for this home which seeks to prevent rather than to cure tuberculosis in children.

The sixty guests will be some of the youngsters who are at home from boarding schools for Easter—friends of the sons of the household, Edward H. Bennett Jr., who goes to St. Mark's, and Joseph Mead, who is at home from Deerfield, Mass.—and their parents. I understand there will be two kinds of refreshments, some for the youngsters and others for the "olders."

Easter flowers and toy and novelties will be on sale today in Lake Forest at the annual Easter sale of the parish guild of the Church of the Holy Spirit. Mrs. James O. Heyworth, Mrs. William E. Casselberry Jr., Mrs. Uri B. Grannis and Mrs. Ralph S. Longstaff will be selling flowers and plants, Mrs. De Forest Hubbard and Mrs. Richard S. Mabbatt will have a table of novelties and Mrs. T. Philip Swift and Mrs. Gilbert E. Porter III. will be in charge of the table of Easter nests and toys. Homemade candy, cake and bread will be on sale also, and some second hand books.

Easter Duck Hunt Today.

About 100 of the "poor little rich" children of the city will be invited to an Easter duck hunt at the Drake this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The hunt will take place in the fountain court and the avenue of palms and it is a real live little duckling that is to be hunted. Among the children who will take part in the hunt are Joan and Betty McArthur, Charles, Jimmie and Betty Buck, Betty Fleming, Larry and Charlie Frahm, Jackie Reed, "Woody" Walton, and Johnny Clay.

Mrs. Philip L. Reed, Mrs. William M. Dixon, Mrs. Frank A. Lagorio, and Mrs. Albert Seckel will be the chaperones at the annual Chicago

BY PAUL POTTER.

Lilies are to Easter what evergreens are to Christmas. And the fact that florists have been busy for three months growing under glass some 10 to 12 million potted plants with an average of three blooms each, plus some million other Easter lilies for cut flowers, indicates how popular the flower has become in the United States.

In the Chicago area alone, according to estimates furnished yesterday by florists of the Florists' Review, from 175,000 to 200,000 potted lily plants of 3 to 4 blooming buds each will be used in homes and churches of the metropolitan area. In addition, from 15,000 to 20,000 other flower Easter lilies will be available.

There was a time when most of our Easter lily bulbs were imported from Bermuda, and the industry was as important to those farmers as the coffee business is to Brazil growers. But in recent years diseases infested the bulbs and fields and now most American bulbs come from Japan.

More than 20 million bulbs were imported by the United States last fall. There will be somewhat fewer lilies but of just as fine bloom and length of stately stem as ever, florists declare, for those who love the symbol of purity and innocence.

It takes about 13 weeks to produce lilies in greenhouses, and that is about the only successful place to grow Easter lilies. It takes six weeks for blooms after the buds first appear. Careful and tedious attention must be given to keeping the atmosphere cool and moist, while sunlight through short winter days is being courted by the growers.

Most gardeners appreciate that lilies form a valuable addition to the bed of perennials in the open garden, supplying blooms throughout the growing season if given special care. The white Madonna lily is one of those requiring little care, growing four feet high and blooming in June and July. The bulbs should be transplanted in August in order to make leafy growth in the fall for next year's bloom.

The gold banded lily, white with gold or yellow bands and dark spots on each petal is one of the largest of the lilies, but requires considerable care and does not last long in most gardens. Together with the other lilies it prefers sandy, peaty soil among the rhododendrons or other perennials. All lilies like leafy mold and rich soils, taking an abundance of plant food.

The white regal lily with its yellow throat and some pink in the petals is another popular lily in the garden. Then the handsome lily which comes in pink, white and crimson with crimson spots, thrives in deep rich soil and should be planted in the foreground of the perennials since it rises but two or three feet.

The tiger lily is probably next to the Madonna in popularity, since it is the easiest of all to grow. Its orange petals spotted with dark brown to purplish tints ride the breezes atop a stem that may grow six feet high. The plants require neat stakes to prevent breakage in winds, or must be planted closely together.

Another favorite is the scarlet Turk's cap or turban lily, blooming for some gardeners and defying the care given by others. It grows best when little disturbed, likes the sun and leafy mold or sandy soil.

Lily of the valley, the delight of spring gardens, is well adapted to shady areas of the garden under trees, bushes, or to the north of the house. The roots are planted 15 to 18 inches apart and soon grow together to form clumps and a dense mat. The bed should be dug up and the plants thinned out every three or four years, mounding the soil on such occasions. Ample plant food should be given each season to this delicate yet hungry little flower.

Critic Finds Wright's Book Amazing Story

All Questions of His Life Are Answered.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.
"An Autobiography: By Frank Lloyd Wright." (Longmans-Green.) Published March 30.

It is the rebels in the world who make its history, the life story of Frank Lloyd Wright is an historical document, for Mr. Wright has accepted neither in his art nor in his life the established canons. Mr. Wright's life story is better known in its surface facts—than the life stories of most of our contemporaries, for he has been by a strange combination of fate and his own insurgent actions "news" for twenty years and more.

Mr. Wright, as a person, has achieved the well known privacy of the goldfish. The whole world watches him swimming around in his fish bowl, and the slightest flick of a fin or the most casual roll of a glassy eye and there is a romantic tale about him. He has come, through the years, to seem to the public a strange, a great lover.

Mr. Wright was something of a history maker in his art long before he began that goldfish bowl existence. Whatever America thinks of him as an architect, the world at large looks upon him as the most brilliant and creative architect in American history. One has only to travel a bit abroad to become startlingly aware of that fact.

Mr. Wright's autobiography is naturally concerned with his work, and he writes with passion about it, and at times with compelling force and beauty.

But to the ordinary reader Frank Lloyd Wright's autobiography is the story of that darling goldfish and the other [lady] fishes that have swum languidly or spectacularly in the bowl with him.

The first thing that that reader wants to know is, "Does he tell about Mamah Borthwick? Does he mention Miriam Noel? What does he say about his first wife? Does he explain the circumstances of his latest marriage?"

The answer to all of those questions is: "Yes." Mr. Wright tells all! And as he tells it the story takes on an epic quality. It is like something out of Balzac. It is pressing, urgent fact such as fiction could never devise, or would dare to devise, lest it seem fantastic. It is the romantic story of a great lover who found his life miraculously renewed.

To a very few it comes a second time. To Frank Lloyd Wright love—no passing casual passion, but something that he believed to be true love, marriage in the truest sense came four times. He was no philanderer. In the intricacies of his heart (as recorded in the autobiography) love and parenthood were intertwined. He was always a good father. It was mostly for the sake of his baby (born in wedlock) that he was so bitterly concerned during his last unfortunate tiff with the law about his private affairs.

The facts of the autobiography, so far as his loves were concerned, are that he married very young, a woman whom he always respected and who refused for years after he left her to divorce him. By her he had six children, and his unrequited and un-falling love for his children, newspaper interviews of the day show, she felt sure would bring him back to her mother. He fell in love with a woman who was married and herself had two children. Four people talked everything over on both sides, divorces were refused, and after a year's testing of the old regime Frank Lloyd Wright and Mamah Borthwick [Cheney] openly went away together. He was faithful to her and his love for years. Fate ended his mortal association with her by a hideous tragedy—the burning by a maniac of the house in which they lived (which he had built for her) and the death of Mamah Borthwick and—notice the child theme—her two children who were living with them.

It was as a comforter in his desolation that Miriam Noel came into his life—she, too, had suffered, she told him. He found her, one suspects from the autobiography, less than he had hoped in the comforting line. When he finally obtained his divorce from his first wife he immediately made her his legal wife—she had been his companion for years. And finally, when they couldn't get along at all, she gave him his fourth chance at "happiness." And when he asked his second wife for his freedom she did as she had been done by the first wife, and refused it to him.

So he took it, and with his Oliviana faced a world which had already, he thought, done all it could to him. He was mistaken, for, settled comfortably with Oliviana, her child by her first husband and their own baby, he was arraigned on the Mann act (amusedly he points to the fact that Mr. Mann used to sit a few pews away on Sundays in his uncle's church in Chicago when he first came to town) because, he points out with irony, he and Oliviana openly rode across a state line instead of walking and had with them a desired child whose parentage they were proud to claim.

What a story! Mr. Wright tells it all in chapters tucked here and there among the long and brilliant discussions of his artistic theses and among rarely beautiful chapters about his boyhood.

Characters Who Figure in Life Story of Frank Lloyd Wright

Left to right: Frank Lloyd Wright, internationally known architect whose sensational love affairs have led him into many court battles, as he appears today at age 62 years; Olga Milanoff Wright, the architect's fourth and present wife, who figured in last legal battle, and Mamah Borthwick Wright, the second wife, who was formerly the wife of Attorney Edwin L. Cheney of Oak Park. She was murdered at Taliesin, the Wright home, with two of her children by a crazed servant.

Wright Tells Own Story of Art and Love

Architect's Book Recalls Stormy Career.

1910, leaving Mamah in Berlin. In the three years of his absence he had made a tour to Japan with her. This tour he termed a "spiritual hegira." Mrs. Wright, however, accepted him readily back into her household as she had promised. But six months later Wright was off once more to Berlin.

Mrs. Wright again accepted the departure calmly, but Cheney did not. He divorced his wife on charges of desertion. The public next heard that Wright and the partner of his "spiritual hegira" were living at Taliesin. Wright announced that he was thus forced to defy convention because his wife would not divorce him.

Then came the night of tragedy in August, 1914, when John Carlton, a crazed butler who had been discharged, set fire to the home at Taliesin and locked all the doors but one. As the seven occupants, including Mamah Borthwick Cheney and her two children, emerged from the exit one by one, he killed each with an ax.

Wright was in Chicago at the time. He returned to Taliesin and heartbrokenly buried Mamah. Five months later he met Miriam Noel, a sculptress and divorcee well known in Parisian art circles, who came back to the United States at the outbreak of the war.

Many years later Miriam described her first meeting with the architect, saying: "It was not many months after Mamah Borthwick died that he met me. He hadn't been with me ten minutes when he said: 'You're mine. I'm going to have you.'"

Once more Wright asked his first wife to divorce him. Her answer was an attempt to have Mrs. Noel deported as an undesirable alien. Mrs. Noel went to live with Wright at the second Taliesin, a $150,000 abode even more beautiful than the original.

Receiving a commission from the Japanese government to build the Imperial hotel at Tokyo, Wright went to Japan, this time accompanied by Mrs. Noel. They stayed there nearly five years, returning in 1922. A few months later his first wife allowed him to obtain a divorce. He immediately married Miriam Noel.

Miriam had lived happily with Wright as his common law wife for seven years, but she apparently could live with him legally for only three months. She left him and in 1925 filed suit for divorce. Here the name of Olga Milanoff, the fourth wife, first appeared. Olga was a danseuse from Montenegro who had been taken up by Chicago society for a time. She was married to one Vladimir Hinzberg. He divorced her in Chicago after she had left him to live with Wright as his housekeeper at Taliesin.

When Miriam heard that she had been supplanted by the dancer who changed her mind about divorcing Wright. She began a long fight against giving him his freedom which was not ended until a divorce was

'November,' Story Flaubert Wrote of Self, Is Published

The Roman Press is making its bow to the world with the publication of Gustave Flaubert's neglected "November." This record of a man's soul is interesting and valuable for a variety of reasons. Flaubert wrote "November" before he was twenty and put it aside because he had told too much about himself. He later attacked authors for writing so much about their own personal experiences so he could not very well publish a book in which he revealed his own soul. For many years this book was lost in a pile of diaries in his desk. Very little is known about the young manhood of Flaubert because when he adopted a rigid objectivity and classic restraint in his literary work he carefully concealed from the world the activities and thoughts of his private life.

"November" is the only purely autobiographical novel Flaubert ever wrote and for some curious reason has never before been published in America. The story itself is simple enough. It merely records the gropings of a sensitive adolescent youth longing vaguely and sensuously for love and life, but the style is unusual in its richness and passion and beauty.

Conversation, Like Other Arts, Has Own Rules

Erskine Reviews Work of Grenville Kleiser.

"How to Improve Your Conversation," by Grenville Kleiser. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

NO art is less frequently practiced than conversation, and it is almost startling to see a book on this neglected subject. Oratory and monologue, we have been told, are the forms of discourse natural to a democracy where men harangue each other, but conversation belongs to a settled and polite society where there are long memories and rich ideas. Conversation is to speech-making what chamber music is to solo performance, a sensitive collaboration with fellow artists, a subordination of one's ego, a creating of an intellectual pattern, which is partly a game and partly an expression of character. The first principle of conversation as an art is that we should be able to talk of any subject in a group of any size, assuming, of course, some common sympathy even in the large group. But with every addition to the group the tone should become lighter and the subject inevitably more restricted, as it adapts itself to the greatest common denominator of the group.

Conversation, therefore, involves more than two people. In the drawing rooms of the eighteenth century, whether in France or in England, or in those American circles which preserved the aristocratic tradition, it would have seemed a bad lapse of manners if the conversation had ceased to be general and had broken up into talk between couples in the corners.

One of the most helpful discussions of the art of conversation occurs incidentally in "The Autocrat at the Breakfast Table," by Oliver Wendell Holmes. The rules suggested by Dr. Holmes, some of which are admirably elaborated in Grenville Kleiser's book, are those that were practiced by the cavaliers at the court of Charles I. in England, or at the court of Louis XIV. in France. The brilliant lyrics of Lovelace and Suckling owe their form to the training those poets enjoyed in beautiful conversation.

Grenville Kleiser emphasizes the importance of the voice in conversation. A pleasant voice, good diction, well chosen words, are virtues in any form of discourse, but even without them we can still talk in some crude fashion. For conversation, however, they are essential, especially the voice. So many arts are coming to perfection in our country that conversation may well be restored to us, with the best traditions of the past and with some innovations of our own.

Cradle of Conflict
by OWEN LATTIMORE

Battle ground for centuries, exhaustless reservoir of surplus populations, Manchuria measures her history not by years but by the ebb and flow of invading peoples. Here is her story, told by an American explorer who has known the Far East since childhood. His book removes a thousand misconceptions about this focal point of world interest and shows the present crisis in its true light. His earlier books, "The Desert Road to Turkestan" and "High Tartary," have established him as an unique authority on the Orient.

Betty Knode Sets June 18 for Wedding

Latin school dance tonight at the Casino.

The Opera club will hold an Easter Junior ball this evening. The four committees include Mrs. John B. Mallers III, Mrs. Kenneth Wright, Miss Miriam Way, and Miss Priscilla Sims.

Mrs. and Mrs. Hemstead Washburne Jr. are having a family luncheon party tomorrow at their residence in Lake Forest, their guests being Mrs. Washburne Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Washburne, and Mr. and Mrs. Gratiot Washburne and the children of the families. Dr. Annette Washburne, who has been down from Madison visiting her mother, has returned to her duties at the Wisconsin General and St. Mary's hospitals, so will not be in Lake Forest tomorrow to hunt Easter eggs with her small nieces and nephews.

The Hemstead Washburnes are leaving Monday for Pasadena to attend the wedding next Saturday of Mrs. Washburne's sister, Miss Josephine Denney, and Prince Nicholas Gallatin.

Some Teas and Dinner Parties.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Perkins Bull are giving a tea tomorrow afternoon at their residence in Riverside for Mrs. Bull's brother and his bride, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Story. The Storys have not set up housekeeping for themselves yet, for they are occupying the Riverside residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Story, while they are on a trip around the world, from which they will return in May.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Burnham of Evanston will give a buffet supper tomorrow evening for Capt. and Mrs. Edward A. Wallston, head of the Naval R. O. T. C. at Northwestern university. Capt. Wallston has been ordered to China.

Next Friday evening the Burnhams will give a dinner party with twelve guests for their good friend, Ignace Paderewski. As usual, when the great pianist goes out for an evening, there will be bridge after dinner (last year at the Burnhams' bridge party for him the bridge continued until six o'clock in the morning). Paderewski always stays for a few hours after a concert, so the dinner will not be served until 9 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Nelson will open their residence at 4600 South Boulevard on Friday evening, April 8, for the benefit of Lincoln Center camp and the Friday morning forum. The program will be an operatic recital of "Mansueto," the libretto of which was written by Mr. Nelson and the music by William Lester.

Give Welcome to Jimmy Braun.

A group of boys from the Latin school formed a committee of rip-roaring welcome to Jimmy Braun when he arrived at the Illinois Central station yesterday for his Easter vacation from the Asheville School for Boys.

Donald Cotton, Hubbard Phelps, Bob Shotwell, and Buddy White were among the dozen or so boys who performed a "Greeter Glee" act at the station by greeting the homecoming student with a pompous blast of band music. The keys to the city were presented with great solemnity and high oratory as to practically overwhelm young Mr. Braun. His mother, Mrs. William M. Scudder of 30 Scott street, was at the station to meet him but took no active part in the ceremony.

Mrs. C. Morse Ely is expected to return next Wednesday from Florida and Thomasville, Ga., where she is spending Easter with her son, Jay Morse Ely, and his family.

From Atlantic City comes word that Miss Marjorie Montgomerie Ward is spending Easter there.

Miss Georgiana Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Moore of Highland Park, will return today to spend the Easter vacation from Vassar with her parents.

Savants Told Ancients Also Favored the Blonds

Cincinnati, O., March 25.—(P)—It's old stuff, Blondie! The boys of ancient Greece and Rome liked blondes, too. So much so that girls "blondified" their tresses even in that remote day. At least that is what Dr. C. C. Broussas of West Virginia university told the Classical Association of the middle west and south.

Attractive Model for Little Girl Lends Itself to Colorful Variations

CHILD'S DRESS.

A dear little one piece dress for the small girl of the family is shown here, and it is one that will provide a basis for many variations. Blue linen with yoke and cuffs in white, a dimity print in a red and white dot pattern with white dimity for the contrast are two suggestions.

The pattern, 3191, comes in sizes 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1 1/2 yards of 35 inch material with 1/2 yard of 32 inch contrasting.

The spicy smell and soft texture of gingerbreads have won them acclamation for years. No matter how often they are served, they always are welcome desserts, or provide an excellent luncheon repast for healthy youngsters.

Served with a glass of cool milk—what could be more satisfying?

For the amateur cook who sets out to make gingerbread for the first, or perhaps second, time, a few warnings must be given. Gingerbreads require slow baking, as do other cakes. But it is especially important that they do not bake quickly, for the molasses ingredient makes them more susceptible to burning.

Put the batter together just as you would a butter cake, and the resultant mixture will be finer. In other words, the butter should be creamed first, the sugar added gradually, and the two creamed together. Add the molasses and beat the ingredients well. Dissolve the soda in the boiling water and add alternately with the sifted dry ingredients. Beat the yolks well, add the whites, combine, and add to the cake mixture. Pour into a greased pan or a pan which has had its bottom covered with greased unglazed paper.

We said gingerbread baking should take place at low oven heat. The oven temperature should be about 325 to 335 degrees F. The time must be determined by the breadth and thickness of the cake pan. The batter is thin, but don't let this alarm you—go ahead and bake it—and the average cake bakes in about forty-five to fifty minutes. Use as large a pan as possible to provide a larger sheet.

Afterwards it may be served plain, or in novel dessert squares.

GINGERBREAD.

1/2 cup of sugar

1 cup of molasses (light preferred)

1/2 cup of butter

1 tsp. of cinnamon

1 tsp. of ginger

2 tps. of soda

2 1/2 cups of flour

2 eggs, beaten separately and then together

Put the ingredients together as directed and bake.

France May Use More of Own Films to Ease Tax Burden

PARIS, March 25.—(P)—The government was understood tonight to have in mind a suggestion that the French motion picture industry produce more films as a means of lightening the tax burden on exhibitors, who have complained of excessive taxation.

Premier Andre Tardieu and the minister of education, Mario Roustan, had a long conference today with theater and movie proprietors in an effort to ward off a closing of all Paris theaters on March 29, which has been threatened in protest against the taxes.

Afterwards private quarters said the officials indicated that the tax burden might be lightened if there were more French made films.

Wall Paper Designs of 18th Century Win Popularity Today

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

William Morris, the Englishman who gave us the Morris chair, said in his writings, "Think first of the walls for they are that which makes your house and your home." When Dr. Berthold Laufer, curator at the Field Museum, mentioned the origin of wall paper Wednesday afternoon in his lecture before the American Friends of China, he called to mind this advice.

Dr. Laufer discussed "Paper and Printing in Ancient China" for this interesting group which has Mrs. John Paul Walling as president and Mrs. Silas Strawn, Mrs. Charles Hubbard, Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland, Mrs. Waller Borden, and Mrs. William H. Bush among the active members. He also had for the enjoyment of the audience numerous illustrations of his subject including some examples of Chinese wall paper.

"The Chinese were first to use decorated paper as an effective and inexpensive wall hanging—a substitute for costly brocades and tapestries," Dr. Laufer said, "but it is difficult to date this innovation for climatic conditions in the Orient have destroyed all the early examples. However, paper is believed to have been used for this purpose in the seventh and eighth centuries. It was the Jesuit missionaries in China who carried the idea back to Europe."

Wall Paper Stages a Comeback.

This is the beginning of the story of wall paper—the rest of the tale, full of fascination! And right now we can talk about it since so many decorators are favoring a revival of the old designs of the 18th century. From about 1910 up until three or four years ago, paper as a covering for walls suffered a lapse in favor of plain canvas and similar materials. But now the paper devotees are shouting, "It's back, it's back!"

The real development of the wall paper idea was due to the "domino" of France, a group of men of the 18th century working in Rouen and other cities of the province to make domino and marble papers which were eagerly bought by the peasants as decorations for their fireplaces.

The oldest of these block printed papers, known to be in existence, was discovered in 1911 during the restoration of the entrance hall at Christ's college, Cambridge. On the original beams of the ceiling in the hall and the dining rooms adjoining, some of this paper was found—the design in black and white done on the reverse of the proclamation of the accession of Henry VIII. The pattern is that of a contemporary velvet or brocade and is signed with "a great H and a goose," the mark or rebus of the master printer Hugo Goes who was living and working in Steingate, York, in 1569.

Gains Favor Gradually.

Then with the founding of the Dutch East India company in 1597, the English East India company and the French company in the beginning of the 17th century, ships brought from the Orient wall papers hand painted with delicate trees, strange intricate flowers, exotic birds, pagodas, and lanterns—different from anything the Occident had ever seen. But these papers did not make the journey straight from the docks to the walls of houses—no, indeed, for their influence was gradual and subtle like that of many things which are to be permanently valuable.

In the earliest wall papers no attempt was made to arrange the designs in such a fashion that they would match when the small sheets were put together on the wall. Not until the master, "dominoier," Jean Papillon (died 1721), invented continuous matching designs about 1688 were people relieved of the casual effects created when wall paper was used.

Another improvement came in 1760 when Fourrier, a merchant in the Rue Carre, St. Martin, Paris, made the first attempt to produce paper in long strips by pasting the small sheets together to form a roll. By an edict of Louis XVI. in 1778 it was decreed that such a roll should contain 24 sheets of 34 feet.

Some types of paper produced down through the centuries have become historic—the "flock" papers, for instance, that came in 1620. Le Francois of Rouen made them through the application of glue and chopped wool. This was to produce the effect of velvet and, strangely enough, nailed them with flat headed tacks. Then in the second half of the 18th century came the development of hand painted panels through Revillon whose factory received from Louis XVI. in 1784 the title of "royal manufactory" with the right to add to its sign the crown and three "fleur-de-lis."

For the convenience of housewives, wall paper was peddled from door to door when it first jumped to this side of the Atlantic the beginning of the 19th century. Then, too, bookellers and stationers offered it by the quire or ream. Plunkett Fleeson of Philadelphia who had the first American factory sold it in his shop with his "bedticks, live geese feathers, blankets, and sacking bottoms."

N. Y. Opera Manager Urges Singers to Take Salary Cuts

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—Giulio Gatti-Casazza, who for twenty-four years has managed productions of the Metropolitan Opera, tonight made an offer to help the organization through another season in spite of a $500,000 deficit this year.

In an appeal to the reticence of the company he urged them to waive questions of contracts and rights so that the institution which gave them their careers might not close. To lead the way, he offered to serve with reduced salary, or even without salary if necessary.

Meanwhile the directors are endeavoring to map a plan of operations for next year.

Institution Is Last Resort for the 'Bad' Child

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"My little boy is 9, and he is so and so and so. Should I send him to an institution?" "My daughter is 15. She is so and so and so. Should I send her to an institution?" No and no and no! Perish the thought! Do everything else first. One "Interested Spectator" wrote of a girl who was insulting to her mother because her breakfast was cold at 12 o'clock on Sunday morning. Shall we threaten her with the reformatory, she asks. The answer is "no."

There's something wrong when a daughter of 15 acts like that. Of course, it is obnoxious—such behavior. But why is it so?

There's something wrong somewhere. Some one has failed, something has failed. Parents—home training—lack of wise affection—bad associates—physical defects—excess of trashy reading or pictures—being forced to live and play on the streets—sex misinformation—humiliation or failure in the outside world. Something's wrong somewhere. The only help lies in finding the cause, removing it and slowly building up confidence, a warm relationship, worthwhile interests, better companionship, and a healthy body.

But in most cases it is the parents who have failed through too great severity, or the opposite—unwise indulgence, or through being away when they should have been at home, or through ignorance in understanding children in general or this one in particular.

For those parents or guardians who are quite desperate there are outside sources of help. Some city schools are developing behavior clinics and are doing wonderful work for parents and children. Some judges of children's courts have established child guidance clinics. Many big cities, such as New York and Chicago, have those wonderful organizations—the Big Brothers and Big Sisters. White boys' clubs, the settlement houses and precipitated. I need a suit and overcoat, size 40; my wife, a coat, size 18, and shoes, 4½ or 5. Our little girl, 8 years old, has no warm garments at all. I'd whoop for joy for any kind of an old typewriter, too, and though crippled with rheumatism, would call for it anywhere in the city. Perhaps I could dispose of some of my writings if I had a machine. A. S."

Chance to Help Deserving.

"I am unemployed and have no prospects of securing anything to do in the near future. We are in desperate need of clothing, and anything you can do for us will be greatly appreciated."

The junior Y. M. C. A. and junior Y. W. C. A. have all sorts of things going on and classes of interest to young people.

Here's a family which has always known comfort, and the poverty and misery they are now suffering are due to a long siege of unemployment. Can you supply some of these needs which are extremely urgent ones?

The Woman Hater

BY MAY EDGINTON

SYNOPSIS.

Chapelle is the stepdaughter of "Ma" Chapelle, who owns Flaxen's Casino, a half of the resort, near the water front of Port St. Fair and Ayra, "Ma's" daughter by her first husband of dubious color, have been trained to assist in Flaxen's. The Chapelles are looked upon as outcasts by respectable island residents and Fair feels that she is a little girl into these unsavory surroundings and left her there at his death. She has kept aloof from all that Flaxen's represents.

Sir Philip Llewellyn is governor and commander in chief of the Tama Islands, Bai and St. Rosario. His young secretary and ward, Robert Grand, is involved in an affair with Mira Worcester, a faded beauty. Her husband has become suspicious. Sir Philip is anxious to save the boy from a scandal. Mollie Bookes, the governor's aid-de-camp, aids Fair, as a favor to the governor, to clear Mira by proving it was she who'd been meeting young Grand secretly, threatening to close Flaxen's and his support unless she consents. Sir Philip is furious with Bookes when he learns that Fair is forced to accept Mira's guilt. He sends for Fair to try to make amends. He arranges to have her return to her father's people in England. Mira Worcester sails on the same boat with Fair. In London Fair is met by her older widowed sister, Sheba, now Lady Rosewood, who owns a famous beauty salon. Sheba takes Fair into the business. Mollie Bookes is sent home to London. He had been in love with Sheba, but she had rejected him. Mira has been spreading malicious gossip about Fair, which Fair will not deny because of her affection for Sir Philip and her promise to him of secrecy. An estrangement develops between the sisters. Among Sheba's clients is Mary Chevonne, who is trying to retain youth and beauty. Sir Philip had had a youthful affair with her and feels honor bound to marry her on his return to London after his term expires, as Mary's husband had died since he had left London.

INSTALLMENT XXIV. BOUND BY A STRONG BOND.

Here and there among Sheba's clients was a business woman who must keep herself fresh for the hazards of her workaday life. But mostly they were ageing wives, frantic in their battle against the younger and fairer enemies whom they sensed in their husbands' lives. Or they were women pursuing lovers, or, rarely, women who clung to youthful prettiness for their own vanity's sake. But mostly they were women restless in the search for more love, women who would not realize their last amorous chapter, write "final" and close and turn the page. They could not find the true contentment of middle age in the other joys that remained to them. Nearly all of them sought one joy, and only one. Nearly all of them had miscalculated it, mislaid it, lost it forever.

And as Fair—allowed after so short an apprenticeship—made a sad harp rather beautiful for some luncheon that was evidently of vast importance in her expectations, she was seized by a consuming pity for these women. Above the client's head—grotesque in its hardening mask of the beauty pack—she could see her own young and slender, sure and strong.

When the mask had been sponged away a gain and speech was possible she saw that the client was looking at her, too. In the glass their eyes met; something familiar about those eyes. What was it? Where had she seen that particular voluptuous look of throat and shoulders—the expression of a temperament that still swayed this woman, even though the shoulders had thickened and the throat relied on persistent treatment for any remnant of youthful beauty at all?

The client spoke: "You haven't attended me before. Miss Winfred is my usual girl. What is your name?" Her voice was soft, deep, thick, and tired. "Chapelle, madam." "Chapelle. I've heard it somewhere, haven't I?" "I don't know, madam, but Miss Winfred is on holiday." The client closed her lips on some utterance. She was silent, shutting her eyes, giving herself up to the massage, rhythmic and soothing. But Fair continued wondering: Where have I seen this face before?

A wide luxurious scarf of Russian sables hung against the amber wall of the cubicle. The client's heavy figure was expensively gowned in soft thin black. On her white hands, with their brilliant nails, were a few rings of illustrious beauty. But the hands were not young. Manicure could not restore to them what they had lost, nor could jewels hide it. She was a woman whose every fatigued line expressed that she had everything—and nothing.

And slowly, as she worked with her light hands, there grew up in Fair an almost mesmeric knowledge as if in some recess of her mind was an illuminating truth about this still woman, although she could not find this truth, nor analyze or express it. She and this eager, sorrowful woman were as if bound together by some strong bond that was felt and could not be seen. Still, as one mesmerized, she finished the treatment, the vanishing cream was smoothed in, the rouge touched on, the powdering was perfect. The client looked very little younger, thus, but she made a handsome painted picture.

She looked intently at herself in the mirror. "You're better than the other girl. I'll ask for you again—only I don't often come to the salon, you know." "No, madam. I haven't seen you here before." "Lady Rosewood sends a girl to me. I haven't seen Lady Rosewood for some time—I didn't do the season. I stayed in the country resting. I was dining. Lady Rosewood is a friend of mine—I hear she's gone up north?" "Yes, madam." Now her heart beat thick and furiously. And it seemed to her that in a moment she must know something that would matter to her greatly.

She lifted the sable scarf around the client's shoulders. "Haven't Lady Rosewood a younger sister here with her now? I'd heard so, I think!" "I am Lady Rosewood's sister." Now stillness in the cubicle, and the client dropping her vanity bag and Fair picking it up. "Thank you . . . So . . . of course! Of course! Chapelle. Sheba was a Chapelle. You're not a bit like her . . . And are you interested in the work?" But this was not what she was trying to say. She was going to say something else, that something of tremendous importance, very soon. It was there, unspoken, between them.

"The work is extremely interesting." That, too, was trivial and stupid. "Let me see . . . I haven't heard much lately of what has been happening, but I know some one said that Sheba's sister had lately arrived from the West Indies." "From the Tama Islands." "The Tamas." The client stood up and steadied herself with a hand against the amber wall. "I'm going to ask you to come to my house and do my face instead of Miss Winfred in future, if you will. I'd love to talk to you. I have friends in the Tamas"—she gasped and put her fingers nervously to her throat—"a great friend. I was planning to go out last spring. But . . . well, you'll come?" "I'll come, of course."

"Apart from business . . . You must come!" "It is so charming of you to say so." The pulses beat all over her body, her heart clattered. "You know my name?" "I fear I wasn't told, madam." "Mrs. Chevonne." The client was gone within the next quiet, confused, turgid minute in which further meaningless courtesies had been uttered. The salons were very empty this August morning—with the season over. Mme. François stood close to Fair, saying confidentially: "Did she mind that she had you instead of the other?" "Not at all."

"You are very pale, my dear. Are you ill? No? But you are pale. Ah! You should have gone with her ladyship, perhaps, to the moors." Mme. François regarded her closely. In her large brown eyes were curiosity and knowledge. All the salon knew the stories about this girl from afar. They had been colored more highly within those golden walls. This strange, beautiful, and surely rather wild girl had a past which . . . Quiet sharp eyes of masseuses and manicurists had seen the dawn of estrangement between the sisters. And Madame continued with increased familiarity: "You do not seem so happy, my dear."

A pause. "Who is my next client, madame?" "Ah! said Madame easily, "another one of the Winfreds. I am glad Mrs. Chevonne likes you so well. Yes, I thought she looked pleased when she came out. And it is a difficult client, n'est-ce pas?" "She was rather charming to me."

"Usually Winfred goes to her house. She likes to keep the beauty a secret." Madame laughed—thin, still youngish woman with her arresting big brown eyes, she could afford to laugh at Mrs. Chevonne. "It is pitiful, is it not, Miss Chapelle, when it is too late?" "Too late?" She moved a little away from Mme. François, sorted the fashion papers scattered over a side table. But Madame's voice followed her, tinged with the vitality of her interest. The salon was still empty, save for a few clients in the cubicles upstairs.

Hot Baths Fail to Melt Away Excess Pounds

But Diet and Exercise Do the Trick.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

A correspondent relates in disappointed terms that she has been taking sweat baths daily in the hope of shedding fifteen pounds—and now at the end of a month she is just where she started. Only she feels weak all the time.

She fills a tub with water as hot as can be endured and stays in the tub for fifteen minutes, adding hot water from time to time to keep the temperature high. Then she wraps herself in a woolen blanket for a half hour. She perspires, all right. But the weight loss over a period of weeks is not what she hoped for.

This is perhaps the most disappointing of all easy methods of attempting to get weight down. It fools people in the beginning, because the profuse flow of perspiration naturally lightens the body weight. The trouble with the system, however, is that the loss represents only the removal from the body of fluid. This is quickly restored by the ordinary day's meals. It's just as well that these "lazy sisters" do eat between hot baths. The constant loss of water from the body without restoration from food might result in serious damage.

Turkish and sweat baths may be considered in the light of accessory treatment in a reducing program. But they should be done in conjunction with rational dieting and exercising. A person must be in good health, too, to stand the once a week sweating bath.

These baths have value as cleansing agents, but if pursued to extremes the tissue sags and one looks older as a consequence. People with weak hearts or whose organs are not in A1 condition should avoid sweat baths. Far better for daily reducing work is the daily warm shower followed by cold. The same correspondent inquires about water drinking and the use of salt when one is reducing. The charge against salt is that it encourages over-eating. So its intake should be reduced to the smallest amount possible. You can go on perfect orgies of water drinking when you are reducing—and profit therefrom. Water is not fattening. It's the food you wash down with water that earned water drinking its questionable reputation in reducing programs.

Girl Deplores the Exchange of Risky Stories

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I have been engaged in several serious discussions lately in connection with the exchange of 'naughty' or what I'd call 'raw' jokes and stories in mixed company. 'I've always contended that it was a reflection on the women present. That husbands who tolerate another man's relating a filthy tale aren't to much. I'm over 25, but unmarried. The couples with whom I go around are given to this sort of thing. They claim it is because I am not married that I assume my attitude. When I marry, my viewpoint will change. For the life of me I can't see how marriage is going to change your sense of decency. A dirty story is a dirty story to me, whether told by a single or a married person."

"The girls make me sicker. There's something so degrading about it all when they attempt to 'tell one, too.' But what amazes me is that their husbands will sit there and not discourage the telling. What is the matter with me, if anything?" Nothing the matter with you, B. E., except a few nice old-fashioned reservations which it is hoped you'll cling to tenaciously. That story telling world of which you write simply needs a few more of your kind in the audience. Women—and men—who refuse to encourage the story teller with hah or giggle.

Marriage includes no license to the risky story teller. In fact, the very adulthood of those engaged in matrimony should forbid it. It's infancy at its worst that is revealed, under the circumstances. Back of the barn bad boys! Arrested development, really! So, you, as the sophisticated single person, B. E., might inquire some time why minds are allowed to stop functioning after marriage? Why husbands do not discourage their wives' risky recitals is one of the things about modern men to be deplored. Just a few sharp rebuffs from the big brothers and girls would take up the cue quickly enough.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—Mrs. Eugene A. Phillips has returned after passing a year in Europe and gave a luncheon at the Plaza yesterday.

The duke and duchess of Manchester, whose marriage took place on Dec. 17, have returned from a long visit in Cuba and have a tower apartment at the Waldorf-Astoria. The duchess was Miss Kathleen Dawes of London.

William Thaw III, and Miss Virginia Thaw of the Berkshire started for Green Pond, S. C., for some shooting during the Easter vacation. John W. Herbert, who passed the winter at Sabirity hall, Augusta, Ga., has returned to his apartment here. Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Delafeld have returned from Palm Beach.

Sinai Opera Rehearsal.

The Sinai Light Opera company is holding rehearsals at the Emil G. Hirsch center, 4622 South Park way, for a production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Iolanthe." It will be presented at the center on the evenings of March 30 and April 3.

Show Flower Paintings and Win Applause

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The Chester Johnson galleries, Fine Arts building, are rushing the season pleasantly with an exhibit of flower paintings. The paintings are by various artists and illustrate various manners in the craft of color. Marie Laurencin remains deliciously herself with a harum-scarum grouping of blossoms, all in the most delicate of shades, presided over by an optimistic bird of the valentine persuasion.

Lintott, the English painter who was here this winter as a visiting artist and who executed a brilliant portrait of Mrs. Howard Linn during his stay, is represented by two effective canvases. One is a charming and graceful arrangement of spring flowers in a glass, slight but exquisite, and the other a more serious study of white flowers in a white porcelain vase.

Braque is present with a low bowl of flowers tuned to a dull olive. Redon shows a brilliant little jar of red and gold blossoms, and another in the same key but less decorative. There is an arrangement by Renoir and a new name, Loiseau, offers a decorative canvas, extremely effective.

Going further north, after enjoying all the flowers, we find in the Allerton House gallery paintings by Beauford Floyd Jones. A portrait of a young boy is nicely handled and so is a harvest field, overflowing with vines and pumpkins. Mr. Jones has a calm recital of the Illinois Central tracks which holds the attention and one or two delightful water colors and landscapes.

Further north still, we find the Palette and Chisel club, 1012 North Dearborn street, busy with its fifth annual exhibition of water colors, pastels, drawings, and color block prints, an exceedingly interesting show and well worth while. There are a number of large works scattered among the smaller pictures and, large or small, almost every canvas holds something to commend it. Among the most important offerings are "Upper Town

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Mills were hosts at dinner this evening in compliment to the new United States ambassador to London, Andrew W. Mellon. Mr. Mellon returned to Washington today after being in his Pittsburgh home for the celebration of his 77th birthday yesterday. Others at dinner were the attorney general and Mrs. Mitchell, Secretary of the Navy Adams, the British ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay; Senator and Mrs. David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, Senator Frederick Hale of Maine, Representative Ruth Pratt of New York, Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Arthur A. Ballantine, the director of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Mr. Mellon's predecessor as ambassador to London, and Mrs. Dawes; the chairman of the federal reserve board and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, the new honorary counselor of the United States embassy in London, David E. Finley, former special assistant to the secretary of the treasury, and Mrs. Finley, and Mrs. Frederick A. Keep.

The secretary of war, Patrick J. Hurley, will be joined tomorrow by Mrs. Hurley, who will return from Epping Forest, Fla., where she has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred I. du Pont for ten days. The secretary of commerce and Mrs. Lamont were joined today by their son-in-law, Charles Eskridge Saltzman, who came from New York to spend Easter with Mrs. Saltzman and her parents.

The minister of Greece and Mme. Simopoulos were hosts at breakfast this morning to the members of the Greek colony in Washington, the festivity celebrating the anniversary of Greek independence and followed the service in St. Sophia's Greek Orthodox church.

Owners Take Purse Cut to Prolong Meet.

Bayard, Fla., March 25.—[Special.]—The St. Johns Park race meeting will not close tomorrow, as was announced by officials yesterday. As originally planned the meet will continue until next Thursday.

Several hundred horsemen asked the owners of the track today to remain open and all agreed to accept a cut in purses. The purses for the races, which started last Monday, were $500 to $800, but starting on Monday the maximum will be $400.

Make Speed Pays $47. Make Speed, a rank outsider, returned $47.10 for a $2 ticket when the Whisking gelding scored a nose decision in the six furlongs of the fourth race, best offering today. Inactive, a field horse, finished second, with Morden third. The time was 1:15.15.

Make Speed worked his way up on the outside and at the head of the stretch took command. Inactive, a determined bid through the final furlongs, but failed by a narrow margin.

Valley, paying $17.30 for a $2 ticket, galloped in front of his field to score a two length victory over Estlin and 12 other cheap platers in the third race at six furlongs. Hazel Gumberts saved much ground entering the stretch and was up in the final stride to gain the show, Marabou, the odds-on favorite, started slowly but closed gamely to finish fourth. The winner was timed in 1:15.35.

Princeton Wins Again.

Mrs. R. S. Pollard's consistent 6 year old, Princeton, won another purse when he showed the way to eight others in the five and a half furlongs of the second. Everytime forced the pace throughout and finished second, a length behind the winner and a head in advance of Polly Jockey. Hanford rode the winner, which paid $3.30. The time was 1:29.45.

Tomaac, favorite over his 12 juvenile rivals, scored a brilliant victory in the opening four furlong dash.

Waukegan Pin Team Rolls High Doubles

Detroit, Mich., March 25.—[Special.]—Two members of Bob O'Farrell's team of Waukegan, Ill., furnished the best shooting in the American Bowling Congress tournament today. Scoring games of 232, 460, and 373, Howard Sandus and Dick Pilatad, Waukegan, Ill., totaled 1,225 to top the card in the doubles event. Though the score failed to place among the 10 leaders, it will finish well up in the prize division.

Sandus rolled several strikes in the opening innings, scoring 225 and 232. Twice he left the No. 3 and 10 pins, which held down his score to 165.

Filatad, an armed bowler, opened with 167, but in the last frames scored 232 and 208.

Fifteen Chicago teams will bowl Saturday night, including Chuck Corker's Mineralites and the Walter Birk Candles of the Randolph league. Many predict that a Chicago team will dethrone the Brokers from the top spot. The Grand Rapids lineup has been topping the main event of the tourney since Sunday with a 2,256 total.

Waukegan scores:

BY BOB BECKER.

More activity has been injected into the waterfowl situation with the announcement that the firearms and ammunition manufacturers have taken a stand against the plan to tax every shotgun shell 1 cent, to raise a fund to purchase duck refuges and breeding grounds. A bill providing for this tax was introduced in congress a few days ago.

The bill provides that states receive 50 per cent of the fund for game production purposes; that the government retain 40 per cent for the purchase of waterfowl grounds (refuges, etc.), and that 5 per cent should go for administration purposes. There is to be a refund for trapshooters, but this feature seems rather ambiguous, as the bill is written.

With the ranks of the duck hunters already disturbed by the new over methods to improve duck hunting, the stand of the arms and ammunition people against the shell tax promises to contribute more fireworks to the coming season's wild duck hunt early in April, when the whole duck situation will be aired.

While conservationists are talking about what to do, the guardians of the duck flocks have been waging a successful war against the duck bootleggers in Illinois. It has been a combined attack led by the Illinois department of conservation wardens, state highway police, and S. C. Crech, United States game protector operating along the Illinois river.

With these three units cooperating to apprehend the trappers and hunters of ducks along the Illinois, some prize "catches" have been made. The largest shipment of birds picked up was 517 ducks and one goose. Three duck bootleggers had this load in two cars. United States Commissioner W. A. Reuss of Springfield, Ill., fixed their bonds at $5,000 each.

Two were able to make this bond, but the third member of the trio about to haul the 517 ducks to a market, is in jail and has been since March 11.
